Lancaster County Flower Show This Weekend

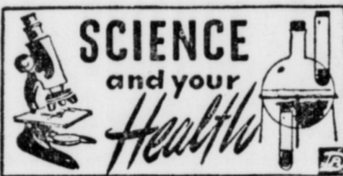

Choice flowers grown in Lancaster County but seldom sold here will be shown in competition at the Lancaster Armory, Thursday, Friday, Saturday and Sunday. Every inch of the building has been completely covered with elaborate floral decorations. Each florist display will have a theme and prizes will be given to encourage their efforts.

Thousands of dollars in gorgeous fall fashions will be used in the various fashion shows during the floral display. A huge fountain in the center of the Armory forms the setting for the fashion shows.

Saturday, Lancaster County's 12 Halloween Queens will make an appearance and promenade around the fountain.

Lancaster County leads not only industrially in Penna. but is the second largest producer of commercially grown flowers under glass. Flowers grown here are in great demand in Pittsburgh, Philadelphia, New York, Buffalo, Washington D.C. And some are shipped as far as Florida. They are considered the last on these markets and command the highest prices.

A SAFE MEDICINE CHEST By Science Features

One household safety hazard is too often found in the very spot where help is most needed—the family medicine cabinet. If it is cluttered, dirty and lacking in the proper medications, it often results in unnecessary pain and worry rather than comfort for the ailing. To be on the safe side make sure that the medicine chest is clean and filled only with necessary articles, properly arranged for simple, quick use.

Start the clean-up by throwing away old, half-used prescription medicine, unless the doctor is consulted about its future effectiveness. Also get rid of that collection of bottles containing last year's cough syrup, burn lotion and iodine. These drugs, and many others, outlive their usefulness by evaporating or crystallizing and can cause severe injury when taken.

See that all items are clearly labeled so the contents do not have to be tested on some unfortunate patient already in pain. Before using, read the label on the package twice, and afterwards make sure to put the top back tightly. Children should be kept away from the medicine cabinet for they may try some pleasant-tasting remedy not meant for them. Poisonous preparations should be put in a separate container, out of reach, and a safe disposal unit for razor blades and other waste matter should be available. These simple measures, along with the advice of your druggist, can produce a medicine cabinet that the whole family will appreciate.
