Farm Calendar

Timely Reminders from The Pennsylvania State University College of Agriculture

Learn by Mail—Forage Crops is a new correspondence course offered by the Agricultural Extension Service of the Pennsylvania State University. It contains 15 lessons on grasses and legumes grown for roughage on farms of the State. Adaptability of the different crops and cultural practices are discussed.

Build Good Fences—Experience has taught farmers how to build good fences. Strong, long-lasting fences must have posts good for 20 years or more; heavy, good-quality wire; properly located and built braces; tight stretchings; and fast-holding staples.

Poultrymen Welcome—Commercial poultrymen are invited to attend the special poultry raising and equipment forum at the Penna. State University on January 4 and 5. All details of the revolutionary management features in the experimental solar house will be open for inspection, and practical applications will be discussed.

Have Cash Reserve—Livestock growers appreciate the value of a cash reserve in their son, Penn State extension agricultural economist, reminds that United States Savings Bonds regularly purchased provide a reliable reserve fund.
