Penna. Game Commission Weekly Letter

Small wildlife travels much more in the late winter and spring than in the preceding cold months. The experience of other years shows many birds and animals will be killed attempting to cross Pennsylvania highways in the next few months.

Game authorities recommend care at night and in the early and late daylight periods because some wild species travel mostly in the dark or near-dark hours. A slow-down of only or 3 seconds would spell the difference between life or death for many creatures running or flying low across roads.

Game animals killed in coming months removes breeders that would have increased their kind in the coverts of the State. More than that, the death of females means the starvation of young in nests or the failure of clutches of eggs to hatch.

Therefore, it is not only an act in the common interest, it is humane for motorists - particularly in the breeding and nesting season - to "give wildlife a brake" whenever it can be done without endangering human life.

Some Wild Creatures Are Born In Winter
Intriguing to many people is the fact some wildlife appears on the Pennsylvania scene at the coldest time of year.

On February 19 a red fox mother and her eight kits were taken from a den in Millin Co. This first catch of the kind reported in 1955 was about on schedule.

Great horned owl females are now incubating eggs. The young will soon hatch. It is not exceptional for the female of this species to set on her nest, completely snow-covered, in February.

In the northern counties, home area for most of Pennsylvania's black bears, cubs are born around the first of February, when snow is often deep and the temperature low. At birth, the young weigh one-half pound or less, are blind and practically hairless. Kept warm in the den by the hibernating mother, these tiny creatures may eventually attain a weight of 500 or 600 pounds.

Daniel Boone Still Hunts In Pennsylvania
Recently, Game Protector Daniel S. McPeck, Jr., Delaware County, checked hunting license applications at the store of an issuing agent in his district. It appeared there could be something "phoney" about one of them. Asked whether identification was required of the questioned license applicant a clerk said, "That one is alright. I know the boy personally."

Lancaster Hospital Group Plans Fashion Show

The St. Joseph's Hospital Fashion Show will be held at the Hotel Brunswick Thursday, March 17 with two showings. The first will be a luncheon show at 12:30 p.m. and the second, an evening show at 8:30 p.m.

Tickets will go on sale at Hager's third floor Friday, March 4, 5 and 6 from 9 a. m. to 5 p.m. Luncheon reservations will be made at the same time that tickets are purchased.

Nurses from the hospital will be ushers and members of the auxiliary will act as hostesses. Mrs. W. Hensel Brown is president of the St. Joseph's Auxiliary and Mrs. H. Harold Sheaffer is chairman of the fashion show.

Pudding with a Capital P

SWEET POTATO PUDDING isn't something new. It's just one of those half-forgotten recipes that ought to come into it's own again. It will, too, by popular request, if you use Jersey Sweets and serve it just once. Once eaten — never forgotten. So here it is from us to you with the best wishes for many a happy dessert time.

Jersey Sweet Potato Pudding
2 cups mashed Jersey Sweets
1/2 cup brown sugar, firmly packed
1/2 teasp. salt
1 teasp. cinnamon
3/4 cup water
1/4 teasp. ground cloves
1 teasp. mace or nutmeg
3 eggs
1/2 cups evaporated milk

Combine mashed sweet potatoes, brown sugar, salt, spices. Beat eggs well and add evaporated milk and water. Add egg mixture to sweet potato mixture. Blend well and force through a sieve. Heat oven to 350°F. Set pudding in pan of hot water. Bake for 1 hour or until knife inserted in center comes out clean.
