Work Progresses On Renovation Of Water System

The water renovations and repairs have proceeded on two fronts during the last week. Workmen were busy replacing a valve which would not close fully at the cemetery reservoir. A cut-in was made in the line just front of the old valve and a new valve inserted. The work was completed last Saturday. All lines were then put in service, and the 1,000,000 gallon standpipe water level was raised to the new higher pressure.

Engineer J. A. Michels explained that while the cemetery valve was not holding, the moment any attempt would be made to raise the water level in the new standpipe above that of the cemetery level then the higher water ran over the cemetery reservoir and down over the cemetery. This was a waste of water and an intolerable condition.

The second front found a lot of work completed near week's end. To date workmen have completely renovated and repaired one of the filter beds at the Filter House. All of the sand and gravel were removed, and the underground lateral system completely replaced. By Saturday, new sand and gravel will have been placed on the filter beds and the entire filter completely disinfected and put back into use.

The repairs to the filter bed were absolutely essential. Through the years, the beds had become clogged, both with reference to the sand and the lateral system. The clogging was principally due to two causes, the Engineer explained. First, the washing of the filters could never be efficient due to lack of proper volume of water. To wash filters so as to dislodge and remove the mud and silt of the surface waters brought to them, a volume of water equal to the area of the bed and of a depth of at least thirty inches is required each minute. This figures out to around 2800 gallons per minute. The greatest discharge the pumps can generate is about 900 gallons per minute for washing purposes. The usual discharge to the water system is 700 gallons per minute. To get a discharge of nearly four times the usual one requires either a new special pump or the construction of an elevated tank. Comparative costs show that the pump is more economical, and it will be installed as another feature of the improvements to be made to the Water System. The new pump will provide a discharge of 2800 gallons per minute at a 40 feet head.

Another cause for clogging of the filter beds is the character and condition of the water. The secret of modern filter

To get better flocculation, the alum must be dissolved in the right quantities and it should be stirred slowly into the water. This process is accomplished with a flocculator. A flocculator is planned to be installed later in the season. To get more settling time, either more sedimentation beds must be provided or other means must be schemed to get the same results with the existing equipment. A plan has been evolved to do this and it will be described in a subsequent article to appear in the Bulletin.

house operation, is to improve the character of the water before it is brought to the beds. There are several methods of improving the water before filtration. Principally they consist in settling out the mud and silt by flocculations and by settling. Flocculation is merely adding alum to the water so that a gel is formed which in settling enmeshes the silt and bacteria with it. Settling of course is merely permitting the water to have enough time in the sedimentation beds to permit it to drop its load of silt and mud to the bottom of the tank.
