

OWL LAFFS

BY A WISE OWL

A South Market Street man was smoking in the Lancaster railroad station in the waiting room. A porter said to him: "Don't you see that sign on the wall. 'No Smoking Allowed?'" "Yes, I do," said the man. "but how can I keep all the rules?" There's another sign on the wall that says "Wear Janelle Corsets."

Burton Shupp asked his father (who is one of our local politicians) what a traitor was. "Pop Shupp" (always thinking political) answered, "A traitor is a man, or woman, who leaves our party and goes to the other side."

Burton—Then what is a man who leaves his party and comes over to your side?
"Pop" Shupp (with feeling) "A convert, my boy, a convert."

Abe Mumma says: "Bragging may not bring happiness, but no man with a big fish goes home through the alley."

In a nearby town, a preacher, who also owned a farm, once saw the hired man resting his horses, and himself, so he asked: "Why don't you trim those bushes while the horses rest?" The man made reply: "And might I suggest that you take a bowl of potatoes into the pulpit and peel 'em during the anthem?"

Which reminds me — "The nicest thing about laziness is that you don't have to work at it."

Philosopher Enck says "A lot of good whiskey is ruined by putting gingerale in it—yes, and a lot of good people have been ruined by putting whiskey with or without it, in them."

Went to a party the other evening and heard one of our old timers give this toast: "To the young girls: May they be good, but not too good; for the good die young, and nobody wants a dead one!" "To the older girls; but not too old; for they dye, too, and nobody wants a dyed one!"

Earl Miller says the man who passes a pretty girl on the beach in a bathing suit without turning around is not necessarily blind—he may be walking with his wife.

A Florin lady journeyed to Lancaster and entering the office of a well-known divorce lawyer she asked: "I want to know if I have grounds for a divorce?" "Are you married?" asked the genial lawyer.

"Yes," answered the woman. "Then you have," answered the lawyer.

He used to take his wife everywhere. But no matter where he took her she always found her way back home.

A fire extinguisher salesman was trying to sell a Columbia Avenue woman one of his latest models - he told her it would give her fifty years service.

The Elderly woman replied: "But I won't be here all that time."

I think the salesman misunderstood her because he replied: "Oh—but you can take it with you when you go."

Women drivers wouldn't have so much trouble squeezing into a parking space if they'd imagine it was a pair of shoes.

Speaking of parking: Remember when the only difficult thing about parking was getting the girl to agree to it?

LOCAL HEALTH COUNCIL PLAN MAKES SENSE

Certainly of more than passing interest was the recommendation last week by the Pennsylvania Medical Society that local health councils be established as a means to a better rural health program.

To us it makes sense—a lot of sense. In our rural areas we do not have nor can we ever hope to have, the fine medical facilities found in the metropolitan areas of the state, as for example in both Philadelphia and Pittsburgh where outstanding medical schools and medical research centers are located.

Such facilities of course in turn attract the bulk of the members of the medical profession. It is perhaps best explained away as a natural sequence.

What then seems to be the next best bet? So far as we have been able to ascertain the local health council plan advocated by the Medical Society to be the answer.

The benefits that could accrue to rural communities by forming such local health councils is perhaps best summed up by Dr. Orlo G. McCoy, of the Society's Committee on Rural Health, who said:

"By forming a health council and putting it to work, a rural area can take inventory and find out where the weak spots are, can define the problems, measure their magnitude and take constructive action to correct the defects."

Certainly the proposal is worth the serious thought of every rural community in the state.

SPEED, DEATH TRAVEL TOGETHER

Harrisburg - (PNS) - The faster you drive — the tighter becomes death's grip on your steering wheel, Pennsylvania safety officials this week warned outdoor motoring enthusiasts of the Keystone State.

"Out on the open highway where there is at least traffic control is where speeders tramp down hardest on the accelerator," a spokesman for the Pennsylvania Bureau of Highway Safety this week told a Pennsylvania News Service reporter.

"Naturally when something goes wrong then, and he collides with another car—or runs over a pedestrian—or rams into a tree, the results are frightful," he commented mournfully.

It was pointed out that 11 states out of the 48 account for well over half of the nation's traffic deaths.

Only one-fourth of these states had a speed limit lower than 55 miles an hour — most of them permitting mile-a-minute speed, or letting the driver use his own judgment as to what is "reasonable and proper."

Pennsylvania, whose limit is 50 miles an hour, was not among the 11 states.

"Analyze such statistics carefully," he contended "and you come up with some damning indictments of speed — truly the nemesis of the unthinking driver."
