

HARRISBURG ROUND-UP

Harrisburg - As Pennsylvania's Legislature now grinds thru its twelfth month of sessioning, a slight break appears to be forming in the dark budget and tax clouds that for so long have hung over Pennsylvania.

At this writing there is nothing exactly definite on the tax front, but indications point to a possible compromise solution being reached before too long.

Many a member of the Legislature is becoming restive over the stalemate - irked by the personal tie-up and fearful of what the consequences may be next year when re-election is sought.

This may combine to speed a solution to the fiscal problem that has been plaguing Penna. actually since January.

Developments along this line point to the first actual bipartisan tax talks between Democratic and Republican legislative leaders - without the presence of the Governor.

More than 100 amendments to the Governor's excise tax have been prepared by Democrats in the Senate themselves.

An administration slapdown occurred in the House when lower chamber dominated by administration forces, failed to pass the Governor's proposed highway program - due in the main because administration forces notwithstanding their majority, ran too high on absenteism. The bill can be brought up again. Speculation continued the early part of the week on the possibility of eventual enactment of a sales tax, notwithstanding the Governor's flat assertion at his press conference last week that he would not accept such a levy. The school fund shortage throughout Pennsylvania - with state aid to local districts still missing thanks to the legislative fiscal deadlock - grew more pressing this week as subsidy bills totaling some $130 million piled up. Administration officials are becoming more and more concerned over the problem as grew districts report in increasing number that they will be unable to meet teacher salary schedules. Among new bills filtering sporadically into the legislative hopper during the week are

Permit Canadians who are resident of the state to be issued nonresident hunting licenses; Further regulate the issuance of antlerless deer licenses.

IN WINTER WITH CONCRETE

You needn't wait 'til spring to do farm concrete work. Valuable all-time production aids such as labor-saving barn floors, sanitary farrowing floors and other inside jobs are easily protected from the weather. Precast watering troughs can be built in the barn. Foundations can be trenched, filled with straw to keep out frost, and concrete placed any time the weather is above freezing.

The necessary precautions for winter concreting are simple. Write for free instructions and plan now to make repairs and improvements as weather permits.

If you need help, see your concrete contractor, ready-mixed concrete producer or building material dealer.
