

OWL LAFFS

BY A WISE OWL

Elwood Martin, who owns a hunting camp in Perry County received the following letter from his Uncle Woff, in Blain:

Mister Elwood Martin

Dear Milk Peddler:-

I thought you would be interested to know that the deer are raisin the devil around your Kamp. A hole flock of does that was left over after the season, come down from the mountains and sure wrecked things. They have your fire place knocked down-how they ever done it I don't know. The pump handle was stickin in your male box and that little frame building you set in to read magazines was rolled half way back to the mountain, close to the place where you stan to shoot bucks. They must have been bumpin at the house because half of the chimney is down and the lawn-well that's a helluva mass. The man at the saw mill sed they were there too but all they dun was eat a pile of his slab wood.

If you would like to have the place cleaned up I could get fellows here to do it pretty cheap right now because hunting is a-bout over en fishin don't some in till Spring.

Mebby they would work for a couple gallons of butter-milk a day.

Fergot to tell you that pear tree in the yard, you know near the house, has a good crop of pumpkins that should be pickerd or they'll freeze. Dam kold up here now.

Orie Beaston was talkin to his wife over at his barn, the words froze and she had to take them home and thaw them out on the stove before she knew what he said.

Let me know what to due.

Yours

Uncle Woff.

P.S. Have a merry New Year and a hum-dinger Kristmas.

P. S. Have one on me back at Henner's.

Your same Uncle.

Last week one day Ethel Herr came to town with his pickup truck to haul the Xmas decorations away from the United Brethren Church - - - after loading the old trees, wreaths, etc. on the truck she drove out to their farm, and went into the house and asked her hubby to unload them. - - - After John had his chores done he went to unload the truck, but couldn't find anything on it - - - going into the house he asked Ethel what became of the decorations - - - she in turn was as surprised as he was to see the truck empty, but after doing a little backtracking they found that the wind had blown the decorations off the truck and scattered them along the road on the way to the farm.

New Year's Eve, several fellows from out of town went to visit a friend on Longenecker Road. - - - Arriving at his home they found him in bed - - - and were told he didn't intend to get out of bed - - - but he did - - - the fellows lifted the bed on end and dumped him on the floor - - - the victim? - - - "Clayt" New-omer.

Harry Darrenkamp, our neighbor, has developed a new way to increase egg production among his chickens. Each nest has a trap door under it. When the hen lays an egg the door opens and the egg falls through. The hen looks around and doesn't see any egg.

"I could have sworn I laid an egg," the hen says, and lays another one.
