KRFULO - A New National Society For The Kitchen

Blairsville, Pa. (Dispatch (Ind.) says:

Americans have turned out to be scrupulous savers when it comes to food as well as greenbacks.

But oft-times morsels of foods saved have their drawbacks.

Consider the matter of left-over foods in the nations refrigerators.

The factual data is terrifying. Assuming there are 25 million mechanical refrigerators in use, and that each housewife has 10 little jars and dishes with bits and doods of mashed potatoes creamed peas, carrots, spinach, broccoli, sour milk, sour cream, banana pudding, bacon fat, beef fat and that left over bit of pie crust, it gives us a total of 25 billion small containers holding odds and ends that the housewife cannot bear to throw out.

If we ever become a nation of soup consumers, most of the left-over could be tossed into the soup kettle. But for some unexplainable reasons we have not, on a national scale, gone in for perennial soup.

The average home procedure follows a definite standard. Left-over bits go into small dishes and by the inexorable laws of gravity more gradually to the back of the refrigerator shelves where they repose an average of 17 days. At the end of a 17-day period, or less, the leftovers are cleaned out and the whole process is repeated.

What we need is a new national association, the KRFULO - Keep Refrigerators Free of Useless Left-Overs.
