Extended or second payment subscriptions to The Bulletin count for extra large votes in the big "Everybody Wins" subscription contest, fast nearing the end.

For example, a certain party bought a yearly subscription in the early part of the contest and now wishes to extend that subscription for another four years at the $10.00 rate now in effect, for the purpose of boosting his or her favorite candidate.

Since a one year subscription earned 3,000 votes, this extension for four years would earn the difference of 22,000 votes. Also the first two years earned 8,000 votes so the three-year extension for only $5.25 to complete five years would earn 17,000 votes and, if the original subscription was turned in during the contestant's first week in the contest, it would also earn the additional 25,000 extra special votes allowed as stated in the opening announcement of contest.

In addition to this are 50,000 extra votes for each "club" of $20.00 turned in.

So, if you and a couple of dozen other friends like yourself would extend your original one-year subscription to the five-year limit you would earn for your favorite contestant the tremendous total of over one and three-quarter million votes which go a long way toward winning that new Chevrolet which is first grand prize.
