Federation Lists Ways To Help Save Wildlife

The National Wildlife Federation has listed eight ways the average citizen can help save the kinds of wildlife that are in danger of becoming extinct.

"Save Endangered Wildlife" is the theme of National Wildlife Week, now being observed under the sponsorship of the Federation and its member state associations and local clubs throughout the country.

Here are the recommended "eight courses of action":

1. Promote research to find ways of restoring the endangered species.

2. Encourage the programs of federal and state conservation agencies. Support the game and fish laws.

3. Work for laws that coordinate wildlife management in flood control, reclamation, river development and agricultural programs.

4. Stop the destruction of wildlife habitat that is caused by soil erosion, over-grazing, burning and other forms of land abuse. Oppose the unwise drainage of swamps and marshes.

5. Start local educational campaigns to create public awareness of wildlife problems.

6. Help safeguard the national and state parks, forests, sanctuaries and other areas that have been established to preserve the wilderness and its wildlife.

7. Work for effective water pollution control.

8. Support the efforts of the Survival Service of the International Union for the Protection of Nature. This organization, with headquarters in Brussels, Belgium, works to save endangered wildlife throughout the world.

Union County at one time included the territory now known as Snyder County. PNC
