Locals Enter State Poultry Contest

Fifty-five Future Farmers of America from the county have filed entries for the Pennsylvania 1956 Chicken of Tomorrow Contest to be held in the latter part of April. Several local youths have made entries. The poultry farmers have entered at least twenty-five birds each. At the present time, they are peeps but the youth will raise the birds and then vie to see who has done the best job. The contest is state-wide and is sponsored by the Poultry Dealers Federation in cooperation with the F.F.A.
Local entrants are Edwin H. Myers, Mount Joy R1; Fred Bernhard, Mount Joy R2, Marvin Martin, Mount Joy R1; Paul Shelly, Mount Joy R2; Janet Wolgemuth, Joann Wolgemuth, Joyce Wolgemuth, Mount Joy; and J. Musser Wolgemuth, Jr., Mount Joy R1.

Poultry Demand Exceeds Production In Pennsylvania

Harrisburg -PNS- Pennsylvania farmers today are about 100 million pounds short of producing the volume of poultry meat consumed within the state, the State Department of Agriculture said this week.
"Our state leads all others in the farm cash income from the sale of eggs and from the sale of chickens, except broilers, but we are still nearly 100 million pounds short of meeting the demand for poultry meat within the state," commented Secretary of Agriculture William L. Henning.

He said that the excess demand for poultry meat within the Keystone State is met with plentiful supplies shipped in from surplus-producing states.
The agricultural chief asserted that increased emphasis on competition in displays of broilers, fryers, capons and turkeys at county agricultural fairs would benefit the poultry industry tremendously.
Consumption of poultry meat is estimated at 30 pounds per person, Henning said. Pennsylvania consumer demand therefore exceeds 300 million pounds per year, but production is not much over 200 million pounds of all chickens and turkeys, he declared.

"The poultry industry as it stands in Pennsylvania today is one of our most important industries, but there is still room for expanded production," he commented.

Farm Bureau Announces Scholarship Plans

The Pennsylvania Farm Bureau Cooperative Association announced plans today to award a scholarship each school year to a male student at Juniata College, Huntingdon.
Ralph H. Horst, administrative director of field services for the statewide cooperative, said the award would be made annually to a second semester sophomore.
Horst added that the scholarship would become effective for the first semester of the winner's junior year. Value of the award is $150 per semester through the junior year, he explained.

"As part of the scholarship, the winner must agree to work for Pennsylvania Farm Bureau a minimum of eight weeks during his Summer vacation at the end of his sophomore year," Horst added.
The process of selecting the first recipient probably will get underway in April, Horst said. It will be the first Pennsylvania Farm Bureau scholarship awarded to a student at a liberal arts college. However, a similar program has been carried out for several years at Pennsylvania State University.

THE BULLETIN, Mount Joy, Pa. Thursday, March 15

The Pennsylvania Story

By Mason Denison, Editor, Pennsylvania News Service
Harrisburg — Something historic of sorts is taking place in Pennsylvania this year as lawmakers of the Keystone State for the first time find themselves in a carry-over session into an election year.
Historically - and albeit somewhat hysterically at times - legislative sessions in the past have wound up the same year they started. The 1955 gathering of the lads and lasses of course has proven the exception.
The 1955 session neglected to take care of that fine point with the result that they are still going strong in a top flight hassle over taxes with 1956 already two months old. Interesting part of the whole show, ironically perhaps, is that this year doesn't happen to be another election year - but a presidential election year at that.
Admittedly the fact that a new President is to be selected has nothing to do directly with the lawmakers - but it just so happens that in a presidential election year the lawmakers themselves are up for election too—that is, all of the 210 members of the House of Representatives and half of the 50 members of the Senate.
The current record-breaking session has done nothing to soothe the lawmakers as they toy with campaign strategy clouded with the spectre of the dismal record of the 1955-56 session.
The fact that the Legislature is still in session and each week approaching closer and closer to the fateful election day, has given many a lawmaker pause for thoughtful indignation. For politicians, it isn't pleasant to have their record trailing so close to them as they sprint down the campaign trail.
However there is nothing they can do about it. In effect the die has already been cast and no matter now how soon they wrap up their legislative fiddlings, the imprint has now been made.
This undoubtedly accounts for the nervous fretting to be found plaguing lawmakers the past few weeks as they dutifully make their painful trek to Harrisburg.
It is a fact that many are convinced that they have more to fear campaignwise from their legislative record than from their political opponents.
The interesting part about the dilemma faced by these gents is that they are uncertain at this point as to which party will be blamed for the legislative fiasco of the past thirteen months—that is, the placement of blame insofar as the average voter is concerned. Each of course blames the other party for the stalemate that has reduced Pennsylvania to fiscal shambles.
This being a presidential election year is important to these people in another respect. Many a hopeful legislative candidate on both sides of the aisle is counting on the inevitable "pull" of the presidential candidate to haul him over the legislative hump, to neutralize to some degree that is, any negative attitude that may prevail on the home front as a result of the abortive 1955-56 legislative session.
The boys are worried - as well they might be!

10,000 Class Rooms Built in Five Years

Harrisburg -PNS- Some idea of the tremendous growth and expansion taking place in Pennsylvania's public school system can be seen from the fact that in the past five years some 10,000 new classrooms have either been constructed or are now in the process of being built.
A spokesman for the State Department of Public Instruction broke it down this way: School districts building thru local municipal authorities are credited with roughly 7500 new classrooms, with 4100 of these being elementary school classrooms and 3400 secondary school classrooms.
On the other hand the State Public School Building Authority has constructed or is constructing about 1125 elementary school classrooms and about 1500 secondary school classrooms.
But in addition to these classrooms, the department told a Pennsylvania News Service reporter, there have been constructed or are being built by all types of authorities, 115 auditoriums, 154 gymnasiums, 55 combined auditoriums-gymnasiums, 582 health facilities, 580 cafeteria facilities, as well as a substantial number of athletic fields plus a few natatoriums.
As a side statistic, at the beginning of 1953 it was estimated Pennsylvania had a need for 15,455 new classrooms.

PP&L Project Increase Capacity In Mount Joy

Pennsylvania Power and Light Company recently completed a line reconstruction project in the borough of Mt. Joy that greatly increases the capacity of PP&L facilities in this area.
In reporting on completion of the $50,000 project, Mr. T. G. Pennypacker, the utility's district at Columbia, said the former 2,300-volt facilities have now been converted to operate as part of PP&L's 12,000-volt system.
The job involved reinsulation of the lines for higher voltage operation, replacement of certain poles, conductors and transformers and the installation of additional conductors.
Underway since late last year, the project was the final step in a long-range post-war program of increasing the capacity of the distribution facilities in Mount Joy, Florin and the outlying areas in East and West Donegal, Mount Joy and Rapho townships.

GET SUPER CHICK GROWTH ON PURINA SUPER STARTENA

Super Growth. Your chicks should grow up to 5.6% faster on 7.4% less feed per pound of gain than ever before on Purina Startena! That's the kind of results they've been getting on many thousands of chicks in Purina Research tests.
Super Safe. You can order Startena with a built-in coccidiosis control. It's the best control ever tested by Purina Laboratories.
Super Vigor. You can actually see the brighter yellow shanks, perkier red combs, and fast, smooth feathering.
Super Economy. It takes only 2 pounds of Super Startena per light breed chick, 3 pounds per heavy. This is a real saving, because most feeds recommend 3 to 4 pounds of Starter—or more—before the chicks are ready for a growing ration.
