New Regulations Cover Special Dietary Foods

Harrisburg -PNS- New regulations covering requirements for special dietary foods containing artificial sweetening agents instituted during the past year are being closely enforced by agents of the Dept. of Agriculture, Penna. News Service learned this week.

Actually the new regulations meant the end of the so-called "crepe label" on dietary foods. Under previous requirements each package of dietary food containing saccharin or other artificial sweetening agent was required to carry a special black-bordered label calling attention to that fact, and also cautioning against use except on advice of a physician.

The change resulted from a Supreme Court decision which declared that the black border was "not appropriate" and would tend to discourage the purchase and use of "what admittedly is a harmless product."

The department pointed out that regulations now in effect require that foods containing non-nutritive artificial sweetening agents shall be segregated from other foods in retail stores so that special dietary products are apparent to the purchaser. Signs with type four inches high reading "Special Dietary Foods" are required where such foods are offered, the department cautioned.

Increasing Trend Toward Soil Conservation

Harrisburg -PNS- Spring plowing on Pennsylvania farms this year is expected to reveal an increasing trend toward soil conservation practices, the State Department of Agriculture asserted this week.

"Plowing on the contour" or in stripes last year proved more popular than ever. Secretary of Agriculture William L. Jennings told a Pennsylvania News Service reporter this week. The practice usually provides strips of grass and sod between strips to be planted with row crops that must be cultivated.

The strips of grass with sod hold moisture and prevent severe erosion and the formation of gullies with an accompanying loss of topsoil during heavy rains.

It was noted that while some Pennsylvania farmers for many years have practiced strip cropping, great advancements have been made in the more than two-score counties where soil conservation districts have been organized and farmers are observing contour planting and other soil water conservation practices.

It is perhaps interesting to note that since 1945 when the first soil conservation district was organized in Pennsylvania under legislative act of that year, roughly 400,000 acres of cropland in the soil conservation districts have been laid out in contour strips.

I Am In The Race To Stay

Two months ago I announced myself a candidate for State Senator for our 17th District.

Because it then appeared likely—and later proved certain—that I would not receive the "official" endorsement of top-level leaders of the party organization, many thought I would withdraw from the race.

Two other candidates did just that. If I also withdrew, it would leave only one name on the ballot—that of the "slated" candidate—and deny Republican voters of this District their right to a free choice of their Senatorial nominee.

It would make a mockery of the April 24th Primary Election.

A PRIMARY Election, as defined by American political tradition, is one in which the voters of a Party, BY FREE CHOICE OF BALLOT, select from those of their fellow-members who aspire to public office, the candidates they wish to represent them in the General Election.

It is my firm conviction that the preservation of this tradition vital to the future of our Republican Party and to the best interests of ALL of our people.

I take pride therefore, in continuing my candidacy for the Republican nomination for State Senator for the northern part of Lancaster County and all of Lebanon County.

Having once entered the race, I had no intentions of quitting.

I have none now.

I am in to stay — I AM IN TO WIN!
