

OWL LAFFS

BY A WISE OWL

A local man who was bothered by an exaggerated case of dandruff finally determined to do something about it. So one day he consulted four different barbers in town. The first one poured green tonic on his head. The second one used red tonic. The third one used blue tonic. The fourth remedy was a bright purple. Three days later he told a friend, "My dandruff is gone, but it has turned into confetti."

A Mount Joy Street boy asked his dad if there is anything more dangerous than a 20 gauge shotgun. "Yes," said his dad, "60 gauge nylons."

A small town is a place where everybody knows what everyone else is doing—and they all read the local paper to see who's been caught at it!

A city feller who didn't know the front end of a goat from a magarolia bush was visiting out the Back Run way, and was watching his week-end host's daughter milking her cow when a farm hand hollered, "Cheese it, here comes the bull!"

The city feller vaulted a fence for safety, but noted to his surprise that the girl never budged from her stool. Furthermore, the bull brought up abruptly, snorted almost apologetically, and meekly retreated to his enclosure. "Weren't you petrified?" asked the guest. "Not me," said the daughter, "but I reckon the bull was. This here sow's his mother-in-law."

A local taxpayer sent a letter to the state revenue department saying that he had cheated in his income tax 10 years ago and had not been able to get a good night's sleep since. He enclosed $25, and added "If I still can't sleep, I will send the balance."

Women's tears were the first successful fluid drive.

I feel quite sure I found a way of curing my wife of sticking her nose into my business. . . . I'm going to go into the fertilizer business.

An eagle-eyed mortician noticed an old crone shuffling away from a funeral service at his parlor, and asked her how old she was. "One hundred and one," cackled the old lady proudly. "Well, well," said the mortician suavely. "Hardly worth going home, is it?"

One reason that so few people recognize opportunity is because it looks like hard work.

"Shorty" Engle, says he knows a wonderful way to improve the flavor of salt. "All you have to do," he claims, "is to take a pinch in your hand, and spread it over a fat, juicy sirloin steak." . . . I believe he's trying to drum up a little business."

A local bank received the following brief note with a final payment on an auto contract: "Dear Sirs: This will make us even. Sincerely, but no longer yours."
