OWL LAFFS

BY A WISE OWL

Look, you guys, it's a long way to the bottom of this column. If you don't co-operate with me and help to fill it, by sending in some good "owl laffs" you'll have to put up with the following "corny ones".

You know the old owl is getting old, and don't get around much anymore to see and hear the things that are going on!

"Les" Kaylor was installed into the "absent-minded professors club" recently — He came home one night last week, put the car in the garage, and left the motor of the car run — The next day when he got up and went to get the car out of the garage, he discovered what he had done, and had to walk for gas. — Must be that "virus" that's going around

A man who owned a house in East Donegal Township decided he was tired of it and wanted to move to town and asked a high-powered realtor to sell it for him. The following Sunday his eye lit on the persuasive ad and handsome photo of the realtor had whipped up for the paper. He gazed at the copy for several moments, then called the realtor. "Take my house off the market," he ordered. "Your ad has convinced me it's the kind of house I've been looking for all my life!"

Last week one day a local woman was walking down Main Street in the rain, with her dress pulled up from the back over her head. I walked over and said: "Lady your legs are getting all wet." As much as to tell me to mind my own business she said, "The heck with my legs; they're 61 years old... this is a new hat!"

Officer Neiss says: "Any car will last your lifetime—if you're careless."

Then there was the fellow who came home at ten past three the other morning, turned the key in the lock and wondered what he was letting himself in for.

Jerry Henderson and Bud Berrier were discussing their car troubles last Wednesday. "What model is your car?" asked Jerry. "It isn't a model," replied Bud. "It's a horrible example!"

Here's a sign I saw in a local feed store. "Only place in town where you can get a chicken dinner for ten cents."

Last week a local legionnaire told his wife he must stay in bed because he didn't feel up to par. She grunted: "What do you mean, you have to stay in bed? You're always like this after you get home from a convention."

Old soldier (from bed): "It's the food they give you to drink, dearest." But that wasn't the end of the argument. The wife finally said: "Don't you know that drinking will ruin your stomach?" Half asleep the old boy replied: "So what I always keep my coat buttoned."

Department Summarizes Activities

The instrumental department of Donegal high school was called upon forty-one times for special music during the school year. Under the direction of H. Morrell Shiels, the school band, dance orchestras, bottlers, and small groups presented programs.

Last fall the events included parading in Ephrata, Elizabethtown, New Holland and Mount Joy; dance band—dance in Mount Joy sponsored by the School and Home Association; special group to the Evangelical Congregational church, Mt. Joy; concert at the Mt. Joy farm show; instrumental group for the farm show; concert in the local E. U. B. church; participating in the Mt. Joy and Marietta Halloween parades and participating in the band competition at the Elizabethtown College homecoming. This last engagement brought the school band a first prize.

In November, special instrumental groups played at the librarians' conference in Millersville and at Heart Haven; dance orchestra played for a school dance; the Bottlers played in Columbia and the band escorted Santa Claus to Lancaster. In December the dance orchestra played at a dance in the Elizabethtown high school, for a dance sponsored by the Mt. Joy Merchants' and for a school dance. A brass sextet played at the school Christmas concert.

January highlights were sending Ronald Hawthorne to district band. In February Dixie Bair was chosen for district orchestra. School buglers played for a military funeral in Marietta; the dance orchestra played for a school dance and two nights at the Lions' Club Minstrel Show; The bottlers played for the local Cub Scout banquet and for the minstrel show. In March seven students played in county orchestra, the band played in a school assembly, the dance orchestra played for a dance in Columbia and 14 students participated in the county band concert in Ephrata.

Also in March the dance band was taken to see the "Benny Goodman Story". April highlights included the brass quartet playing for the local Easter service; presenting a spring concert and parading in the safety patrol parade in which the group received an excellent rating. In May, the dance orchestra played for the May dance in the Columbia High School and the band played at the Marietta Horse Show, marching in the Armed Forces parade and special groups played for the Lancaster Principals Association meeting. The band played for two Memorial Day groups, Marietta and Maytown.

Future events include the band's engagement at the Children's Fair, Marietta. The dance orchestra will also play for the Children's Fair and will play for special dances held in conjunction with the summer playgrounds in Columbia, Marietta and Mount Joy.

Third Grade Gives Program

A puppet show written and directed by Shelby Chunko was presented in a special third grade program last week in the local elementary school.
