Armstrong Cork Co. The plane used for Armstrong business travel is a well equipped Douglas DC-3.

Piper Aircraft Corp. of Lock Haven has lately made the first test flight of their new all-metal 4 place, high performance business airplane, the 'Comanche.' Piper officials were well pleased as the plane gave excellent performance with a 180 horse power Lycoming engine, although final choice of a power plant for production models has not been made. Production plans are under way and first deliveries are expected early in 1957. The Comanche will be the second Piper to bear an Indian tribe name, the twin engine 'Apache' being the first.

Clyde R. Faus, Manheim R2, a student pilot recently made his first solo cross country trip, as planned, making several landings at airports enroute including Stroudsburg, Pa., and Catskill Airport near Albany, N. Y. Clyde started his flying lessons a little more than 2 months ago, and is doing well. His training is being taken under the Korean G.I. bill in the Commercial Pilot course.

Marlin Longenecker, of 'Tropical Treat' is a member of one of the Donegal flying clubs. Marlin used the club plane on Monday morning for a trip to Milford, Del. John H. Myers and W. Dale Crawford, Aviation Safety Agents of the C. A. A. Office in Harrisburg visited Donegal last week on a tour of inspection, and to discuss some amendments to the rules governing flight schools holding Air Agency Certificates with Approved School rating. Mr. Crawford stressed the fact that young men who are considering aviation as a career can look forward to a bright future. He says his office is constantly receiving inquiries from airlines and from industry for pilots, and that the shortage of well trained men is becoming acute. Especially in demand are pilots holding the rating for instrument flying.

Instrument training, by the way, is given on clear days with ceilings and visibility well above visual flight minimums. The method used is to install a sheet of transparent amber colored material inside the windshield of the airplane, while the trainee wears a hood or goggles of transparent blue material. This amber and blue combination effectively prevents vision through the windshield, but does allow the trainee to see the instrument panel, the radio, and the controls. The instructor, being able to see and observe other air traffic, can allow the student to learn instrument flight under simulated conditions. Flight under actual instrument conditions must be done only under supervision of C.A.A. Air Traffic Control and by an appropriately rated pilot.

Walter Reilly, Marietta, is one of our most active pilots. Flying his own plane a Cessna 140, he makes frequent trips visiting friends and relatives in Wilkes Barre, his former home. He is pleased by the fact that the time each way is around an hour and gasoline used is only five gallons.

Prudential Office Commended

For contributing to the all round proficiency of the Prudential Insurance Co's East York District during the past year, members of the District's branch staff here in Elizabethtown joined in receiving a company District Award in the Lincoln Woods Inn, York.

Formal presentation of a President's Citation, signifying a year of outstanding accomplishment, was made at a dinner attended by company officials and the personnel of offices included in the East York District.

Prudential recognition is conferred annually on the 50 Districts which lead all others in all-round accomplishment during the year. To earn its place as one of Prudential's top organization the East York District out-ranked more than 450 similar company units throughout the United States and Canada.

The Bulletin, Mount Joy, Pa. Thursday, June 14

F. Scott Robinson, head of the District's operation, specifically commended the Elizabethtown Staff. He said they not only compiled excellent individual records but also turned in an over-all performance that contributed to the District's high standing.

The Elizabethtown office is at 14-18 South Market St. Operations are under the supervision of Staff Manager Herbert Tyndall.
