There are those who persist in attempting to make an issue of President Eisenhower's health, even in the face of the integrity shown by the President himself in evaluating his condition.

As far as this writer is concerned, the President removed any fears that anyone need have that he would run if he is not up to it physically, when, after his heart attack, he went to the people via press, radio and television, gave the plain unvarnished truth regarding his condition, and said he would accept the nomination if his party still wanted him.

The President didn't attempt to conceal any facts. Based on the best medical advice, he stated exactly what he expected it would be and what he felt he would be able to do if re-elected to this nation's highest office.

Mr. Eisenhower's candor sent his critics reeling. However, his recent operation has provided many of his opponents with what they hopefully consider ammunition for reappraisal. To them let it be said, we think the President will reach his decision just as honestly as he did following his heart attack, and that he will be just as factual with the people.

To those who are bound to make health such an issue, it should be pointed out that no man can offer gilt-edged security on just what his condition will be a year, or a month or even a day after he takes office. That knowledge remains with a higher intelligence than mortal mind.

In fact, it will be clear that when the smoke has cleared from the political conventions President Eisenhower will be the healthiest candidate in the race. This writer believes in President Eisenhower's integrity. He will be a candidate for re-election only after he has prayerfully considered ALL the facts. If his decision is to remain in the campaign, we will be confident that he is as sure as a human being can be that he has the physical powers to serve his country another term.

Walter Dupes, local auctioneer was engaged to call a public sale, back near the Ridge road, but discovered he had also promised another for the same day, and hastily engaged a substitute to help him. The sub did nobly, too, until he was asked to auction a persnickety buck goat. He phoned Dupes and beseeched, "How do I describe this creature? I never saw the likes of it. It has a gray coat and mean and nasty look, gray whiskers, and smells to high heaven. 'Holy mackerel,' shouted Walter, 'Don't auction that. That's the farmer!'"

A friend of mine on Mt. Joy Street, whose doctor advised him to cut his drinking in half, has now eliminated the chasers.

A farmer from out the Green Hills way was contented on his own little rocky plot of ground that he had ventured to Lancaster City only about seven times in his life. On his last visit he suffered a painful experience. A fire siren sounded, and he hastily steered his "Model A" to the curb. When the engine had charged by he proceeded on his way, only to be smacked squarely in the rear by the hook-and-ladder truck. When the doctor restored the poor man to consciousness he asked, "Why didn't you get out of the way? You must have heard the siren." "I heard it all right," he answered, "but it wasn't the darn engine that hit me at all, it was that truckload of crazy house-painters careening along behind it!"

Our neighbor says: The only person who listens to both sides of a family argument is the woman in the next apartment.

Come to think of it, Robinson Crusoe had a pretty good system. Had most of his company with him on Friday.
