The Pennsylvania Story

By Mason Denison, Editor
Pennsylvania News Service

Harrisburg — Ellwood J. Frit, the old sage of pomegranate hill (that's the hill beside Capitol Hill here in Harrisburg) doffed his hat in line fettle the other day and entrained for a much delayed vacation.

"EJ," should any our half-tozen or so readers have any doubt, is the elderly lad who keeps us posted on the "inside dope" of what's going on during legislative sessions.

With the legislature out of town after having been here for nearly 13 long months ("We've been bombed, that's it!" cried an uninformed tap and tavern keeper the next day as he gazed at the empty seats), EJ was off for a well-earned rest.

It is regrettable of course that he prepared to entrain he should have walked into the side of the waiting pullman car instead of the steps.

EJ always has been one of those dramatically-inclined gents. As we pulled him out from under the wheels of the train he told us it was his intent to just wave his hat and step smartly aboard.

He had positioned himself well — but he neglected to note that the train had moved three feet.

So much for Ellwood J. Frit. But his departure does recall the fact that the Legislature has finally departed — which gives us the opportunity for the first time in nearly a year and a half to write about something other than lawmakers.

The other week end we shuffled back to our old alma mater at State College for a two-day session of daily and weekly newspaper editors and publishers from all sections of the state.

It was a good two-day gab-fest of members of the fourth estate. We ran into a passel of our weekly editor friends whose papers carry this column. Needless to say the fat-chewing was tremendous.

But we also ran into a lug from out of the state who is a fellow-columnist — a lad by name of Ed Koterba who writes what we think is an interesting column on the Washington scene.

He calls his column "A Bit of Washington" — which is just what the name implies, lights bits of what goes on in the Nation's capital. Perhaps one reason we have been reading it as we see it weekly in Pennsylvania newspapers is the fact that it is far different from the usual heavy-headed stuff cranked over the syndicates from Washington.

Our reason for mentioning this in the first place is to show what a small world this really is.

After we got through lobbing over each other's shoulder telling the other what a fine column each wrote — we discovered that his lad Koterba is a Pennsylvanian, who did a stint on the daily Waynesboro Record-Herald and is married to the sister of Publisher Paul Chalfant.

That night we dined at the Chalfant-Koterba table — and who should be there but Jesse Garber, now a staffer on the Waynesboro

Mrs. Eisenhower Helps Celebrate Savings Bond Birthday

Among those who helped celebrate the 15th anniversary of the Series E Savings Bond on May 1 were Mrs. Dwight D. Eisenhower and nine-year-old Marilyn Miller, Washington school youngster. They are shown here in the White House just after the First Lady sliced into the four-foot, 300-pound cake made in the likeness of a $100 E bond. Mrs. Eisenhower is honorary chairman of the National Women's Advisory Committee for Savings Bonds. Marilyn was selected for the honor for her outstanding achievements in the School Savings Stamp Plan. The huge cake, decorated in four colors, was baked and donated by Clement's Pastry Shop of Washington as a contribution to the Savings Bond Program. Sales have exceeded $80 billion since E bonds were first offered on May 1, 1941, and today over 40 million people own more than $40 billion in E and H bonds.

paper, but who used to write a column in Bert Miller's semi-weekly Shippensburg News-Chronicle. In the ten years the News-Chronicle has been carrying our column we never met Jesse until that night.

As we say, it is a small world. We only hope we do not meet any lawmakers until next January when the show starts all over again. As for "EJ" — we hope he doesn't come face to face with a moose during his sojourn in the wilds of Canada.
