Mount Joy Street To Be Completed

The sewage work on Mt. Joy Street will be completed! At the regular monthly meeting of Borough Council last Monday night, seventeen residents from Mount Joy St. appeared to voice their objections of the sewage work being incomplete on Mt. Joy Street.

In the discussion, the property owners brought out the fact that sewage operations were begun on the street 12 weeks ago and were still not repaired and finished. One of the objections was the fact that many sinkholes had developed. Another of the main objections was that equipment had been moved from the area to other streets and nothing was being done to complete the street. As a result of the objections, council members told the group that they will plan a meeting with borough authority members and the engineers.

The special discussion meeting was held last Thursday night. As a result of this meeting, the combined groups announced that the contract or will begin completion of the street and will work on the street constantly until it is completed.

Engineer Releases Regulations

At the last Authority meeting held on August 9th the Mt. Joy Borough Council asked the Authority to have their Engineer release some publicity relative to the Regulations which will govern sewer connections. The Bulletin contacted Mr. Joseph A. Michels, the engineer and his statement follows:

"In order to regulate the use of the new sanitary sewerage system now well under way to completion for the Borough of Mount Joy, it will be necessary for the appropriate municipal body to pass an Ordinance or Resolution governing such use. This action will control such things as: the construction of lateral branches from the houses to the curb line and the granting of Permits therefor; prohibiting the drainage of sewerage and house drainage into natural water courses; requiring the abandonment of cesspools, septic tanks and privy vaults and the connection of prohibiting the drainage of certain substances into sanitary sewers; and providing for penalties for the violation of the provisions of the said Regulations.

"The Regulations will probably be ready for submission by the legal advisors within the next few weeks and will no doubt be passed at the next meeting of the Council or the Authority, depending on which body must take action. In the mean time, the matter which seems most urgent is to advise the property owners who will be making preparations for hooking up or who are now laying the hook-up laterals regarding regulations soon to be passed.

"Most inquiries to date concern the required size and type of house lateral. Of course the final word on size and type will rest with the governing body to pass the required Ordinance. But in all likelihood the recommendations of the Engineer will be followed. I shall recommend that the recommendations of the State Code be followed which require one less size of pipe than that of the connecting wye at the main sewer. Since all wyes have a minimum size of six inches this will make the minimum house lateral five inches in diameter. In other words, no lateral less than five inches in diameter can be constructed after the code, or rather, Regulations are made into law. However, it is to be noted here that six inch terra cotta and five inch terra cotta the same and therefore, six inch would be a better size to use as it will provide more insurance against clogging than will a five inch line.

"There has been a lot of discussion over the use of a four inch size for house lateral connections. The difference in cost of the two sizes is approximately fifteen cents a ft. If the smaller size were permitted a reducer must be used and this alone will cost around Two Dollars which would pay for the extra cost of thirteen feet of five or six inch pipe over four inch pipe. The City of Harrisburg requires six inch pipe; the City of York required five inch or six inch pipe; From the standpoint of venting, the six inch pipe offers advantage well worth its extra size.

"The lateral house connection for a distance of five feet from the house wall must be Cast Iron, Extra Heavy.
