EVENING CLASSES
Letters were released on Tuesday by the office of the Donegal High School announcing that evening classes will begin tonight in the school. Six classes will be held during the year. Typing I, Typing II, driver education, sewing, wood shop and art. Several other classes were requested but the classes must have a minimum of twelve members.
Since the driver education enrollment was too large, some of the applicants will be taking the course the first semester and some, the second semester.
Teachers for the courses are Roy Arnold, Mrs. Ruth Peters, Marshall Gemberling, Mrs. Robert Brown, Hubert Peters and Mrs. Arba Herr.

OUT ON A LIMB
By Stumpy McCulloch
The beautiful city gal entered the office of our local dog kennels and tripped up to Young Fred's desk.
"I want a pet," she cooed.
"Gosh, I'd love to, ma'am," Young Fred said sadly, "but the boss is mighty strict!"
Back in 1941, there was just one tree farm! Yep, that's right. At least, there was just one woodland enrolled in the American Tree Farm System in 1941—the year the system was adopted by the lumber industry. Today there are more than 7500 tree farms, and they cover a total area of 38 million acres. That's a lot of trees, all being raised as a crop!
If it's managed right, a tree farm—big or small—can earn good money. One feller up in Wisconsin figures he can make at least five dollars an hour for his work at logging time! That's assuming he harvests mature timber at frequent intervals, and never cuts more than the natural growth between harvests.
I was jottin' down some safety rules for tree farmers the other day. Want to hear them? 1) I always cut dangerous trees and snags before I begin my regular day's cutting. 2) Course, a feller ought to work where he won't endanger himself or anybody else from falling trees or rolling logs! 3) It's best not to work if the wind is blowin' strong enough to affect the direction a tree may fall. 4) I always try to clear away brush, beforehand, from the area adjacent to a tree I aim to cut—'cause this provides more room for my saw and axe, and permits a quick getaway!
5) Before I cut a tree, I figger out a way of escape—well back and to one side, and at least 20 feet away.
6) And if there's anybody else in the area, I give plenty of warning before I cut a tree! Course, most of these rules mean: Use common sense when you're cuttin' trees!
"I wish to marry your daughter, sir," the young feller said.
"Do you drink, young man?" the father asked.
"Well, thanks a lot, sir," the feller said. "But let's settle this other thing first."
So long, folks. See you soon!

ELECTRIC VENTILATING FANS BUILD DAIRY PROFITS!

Proper dairy barn ventilation is a mighty important factor in top milk production. As successful dairymen know, keeping cows comfortable and healthy steps up milk production, increasing dairy profits.
and rusts metal roofs and fittings. By installing an automatically controlled ventilating fan your barn will stay dry and clean-smelling year round.
Ask your electrical farm equipment dealer or PP&L representative about all the advantages of an electric barn ventilation today . . . install yours before the herd moves indoors for the winter.

In addition, a properly ventilated barn gets rid of your moisture problems. Much of the water a cow drinks is exhaled as moisture. This moisture rots timbers
