OUT ON A LIMB

By Stumpy McCulloch

"Ol' Sidewinder is always gettin' into trouble! They was conductin' an auction at his place last week, when the auctioneer fell sick and a substitute was brought in. The feller did might well, too, till he was asked to auction off a persnickery buck goat. Quickly he phoned the boss. "How do I describe this creature?" he asked. "I never saw the likes of it. It has a gray coat, a mean and nasty look, gray whiskers and smells to high heaven."

"Holy mackerel," shouted the boss. "Don't auction that. That's Ol' Side-winder!"

What's the oldest living thing? A while back, I said I thought it was a 4000-year-old bristlecone pine tree out in California. Well, sir, a feller writes that the oldest tree is actually a Macrozamia in Australia, and he says it's 12,000 years old! But of course he can't be sure, because nobody's ever counted its rings! Another feller tells me the record-holder is a gigantic cypress near Oaxaca, Mexico, which has a circumference of 165 feet, a height of 150 feet, and is believed to be 5000 years old! But don't expect me to tell you which tree was planted first, folks, 'cause it happened before my time!

Don't forget about the Soil Bank program! The government pays us an average of $10 an acre a year to turn cropland into tree farms! And timber is a mighty fine crop these days, too, because the price of wood and pulp products is going up and up! For more information about the Soil Bank program, check with your local county farm agent. Or ask your local McCulloch dealer.

I find growin' trees is sort of like having money in the bank! As a feller down in North Carolina puts it, "Whenever I need a little cash, I turn to the woods!" From his wood lot, this feller has already sold a great deal of saw timber and pulpwood, has built a barn and a chicken house, and now he's getting ready to build a new home. "And I figure these 64 pines right behind the old house are going to give me a good start," he says.

Ol' Hannibal bought a diamond ring from a stranger the other day. "If this gem ain't real," he admits, "I been skunked out of six bits!"

So long! See you soon!
