

Action at Stauffertown After Many Long Months

This he will never do again! Tommy O'Connor, six-year-old son of Dr. and Mrs. O'Connor, was fishing on the beach at Ocean City, Md., one day during the family vacation.

Suddenly daddy heard young Tom screeching, "Daddy, Daddy, Come quick!" Doc went running and all the while heard a bird making a furious racket.

The boy had been letting his line run into the surf and a tern had in some way become entangled in the slender thread. His wing was caught and Tommy was reeling in line as fast as a small boy can handle tackle.

With his dad's help they "landed" the bird and despite complete cooperation on the part of the struggling bird his wing was freed and he was liberated to go on his winged way.

Tommy probably is the only Mount Joy schoolboy who has ever caught a bird on a fishing line.

Lost and Found—Can't say that we're looking too hard for the owner of this item for all the days of his young life the editor of this paper wanted a baseball glove just like the one which is now in the window of the Bulletin.

But, these creaking bones will not permit enough use of the mitt to justify neglecting to mention the matter. We're not running a last and found column but we can't help but want to find the youngster who owns this glove.

Art Mayer reddened the faces of three of his friends and proved himself a pretty hot golfer a few days ago. It seems that Art, a member of the Hershey Country club, had been telling his "friends" about his good scores. Three of 'em ganged up and decided to show him up—if possible.

So, Bob Hurst, Dick Stark and Jim Spangler, who regularly play at the Media course in Lancaster, took him along with them and figured that on a strange course they'd clean him good.

Stark and Spangler teamed up against Hurst and Mayer for the round.

But—on the 74 course—their victim waxed hot as a fire cracker and shot a blistering 77 to drum 'em all. Spangler finished with a respectable 88 but Stark and Hurst went 93 and 94 respectively.

Harevy Rettew, known throughout this entire area for his long and faithful connection with Holstein cattle sales, relates a story which almost makes your blood run cold.

A few weeks ago he was in Indianapolis, Ind., attending sessions of a big Holstein owners convention. One evening a session was held in a huge hall atop one of the tallest buildings in Indianapolis. The only way to reach the roof gardens (at least for normal purposes) is by elevators. As Rettew and his party left the top floor enroute back to his hotel the elevator stuck at about the 15th floor.

After a short delay the cage descended to the ground level and was discharging its passengers.

Suddenly the car began to move downward. Someone gave the woman who was stepping off the car a quick push and she went sprawling into the entry area. The elevator plunged downward and came to rest in the bottom of the pit after a relatively short drop of some 10 feet.

Rettew rode the car to the bottom but neither he or any one else was injured. But the thoughts of the narrow escape for the woman

After many months of that some leaks had been practically no action, things discovered and that crews of workers are beginning to work to remedy the situation.

At least, someone besides the people who live there, the Mount Joy fire chief and the local newspaper reporters gave the impression that the situation was worthy of attention.

This week representatives of the state police, the pipe line companies, the state board of health and the Public Utilities commission showed up and began making tests which were more than just sniffing the air.

Fire Chief Ray Myers said that he had read the Bulletin's account and he'd just "check up a bit."

Certain people believe that the day they cut a 30-pound bologna, they will be just about the most popular Scouts in the whole area!

Many and Varied Pennsylvania Products To Go With Boy Scouts On Jubilee Trip To Europe

Accompanied by three Dutch bolognas weighing 30 pounds each, 50 pounds of popcorn, three cans of pretzels, four pounds of potato chips, three boxes of Biscoquick and 200 Bachman chocolate bars, Robert Buchenauer of Mount Joy and some 199 other Boy Scouts will embark Sunday from Quebec on the "Fair Sea" for the International Jubilee of Boy Scouts in England.

Why the assorted Lancaster County specialties? To spread good will and good cheer among the Boy Scouts of other countries whom the Scouts of Region III will meet as they tour the continent!

"Is Robert excited about the Jubilee and the European tour?" a Bulletin reporter asked his mother, Mrs. Joseph Buchenauer, Monday. "He certainly is," she said with great enthusiasm, admitting that it has even overshadowed the wonderful Jamboree Robert has been attending last week and this week at Valley Forge.

When asked if it was a thrill to help pack bags that were going to Europe, Mrs. Buchenauer laughingly boasted that she had packed the "European boys a treat. They plan to use strawberries they find in the markets over there."

Annexation Objections Heard By Boro Council

By orderly procedure, of the weather, arguments official and legal steps are following in routine succession toward a final hearing on the current movement for annexation of Florin into the borough of Mount Joy.

Next step is expected to be taken—or at least considered—on Monday evening, August 5, as the Borough Council meets in regular session.

Monday night this week, in a special session called to hear the question of persons opposed to the proposal, the council accepted a petition seeking annexation and ordered an ordinance drawn which would accomplish that end.

On August 15 they will go to London, from there to Brussels, Utrecht, Aachen, Coblenz, Mannheim, Bale, Zurich, Berne and Paris in other words, Belgium, Holland, Germany, Switzerland, and France.

The boys will travel mostly by bus, using their sleeping bags and camping equipment whenever feasible.

Authority Office Hours Extended During 1 Week

To make it more convenient for residents of Mt. Joy who live north of the Pennsylvania railroad and who will be making sewer assessments during the next few days, office hours of the Borough Authority will be extended next week.

Robert Rosser, chairman of the Authority, said that of the office, located on the north side of the fire house on the ground floor, will be open from 9 until 11 a. m. on Saturday and from 9 until 12 noon on Sunday.

Notices of assessment and of connection fees were delivered this week by borough police to residents of the area.

Delivery marked another step toward the final completion of the sewer project in Mount Joy.

The lines in the north side and property holders have been notified.

While the plant is, and has been for several weeks, accepting sewage for complete treatment, there are many minor pieces of construction still continuing.

At the council's regular July meeting, held on the 8th, the long-awaited petition for annexation was presented by Attorney Rengier of Lancaster representing the petitioners seeking annexation and Attorney Harris C. Arnold, Borough solicitor, talked briefly to the Council in regular session.

Building of a sewer line, it was pointed out Wednesday, is based upon "economic justification" and necessity.

This fact, which will be explained later, is issued as a matter of service to those interested in the Florin annexation project—those who favor the proposal and those who are objectors.

It is an attempt to help clarify, in at least a small way, one of the big questions now under consideration concerning the proposed installation of sewers, when and if Florin is annexed.

Specifically, the question is whether sewers will be constructed throughout the entire area proposed for annexation.

Speaking as a sanitary engineer who is familiar with the methods which must be followed in sewer construction projects (not as THE engineer for the Mount Joy Borough Authority) Joseph Michels, a registered and licensed engineer said:

"In any new sewage system, collection lines will not be laid where it is not economically justifiable. The limit is imposed by the financial consideration involved in negotiations for the money needed to build such a system which will not stand on its own feet, both to recover the original loan and interest on the money loaned until it is paid."

Stated another way, Michels is pointing out the obvious fact that money to build a sewage system must be borrowed and that no lending agency would provide the funds unless all details are completely satisfactory.

Only lines would be laid which are ECONOMICALLY JUSTIFIABLE. Lines which cannot be justified on a financial basis would not be built.

Whether or not it is generally known, not every residence in Mount Joy is served by the new sewer system. If building the line to a particular property is not economically justifiable, it must be omitted.

Where sewer lines would be laid, how much they would cost, when the construction could begin and would be finished is almost impossible to say at this time.

of the weather, arguments and calm manner. Attorney Mark Eaby of Ephrata talked for the "objectors"; Attorney John Rengier of Lancaster represented the petitioners seeking annexation and Attorney Harris C. Arnold, Borough solicitor, talked briefly to the Council in regular session.

The delay was given to allow the objectors an opportunity to consolidate their position and to present their case in a meeting designed to bring forth answers to some of the questions in the minds of some Florin residents.

Although he raised the matter of assessments, taxes, street lights, streets and others, Eaby's principal point of objection for his clients was his claim that as the situation now stands there is not a majority of the Florin area freeholders who favor the annexation.

He added, however, that if there is a majority, he has no further objections to the proposed joining of the two communities.

A week earlier Rengier had stated that his petitions and supporting evidence shows that there are 638 freeholders and that 357 have signed the petition for annexation.

Eaby challenged the correctness of the number of freeholders and wanted time to check in a conference between interested persons—that figure.

He further said that he had the names of "40 property owners" who wish to withdraw their names from the petition. Rengier, however, pointed out that by law it will be necessary for each person who desires to withdraw to appear in the court of quarter sessions and take the witness stand and be cross examined concerning their reasons for asking to withdraw.

Various members of the council responded to the many questions posed by Eaby, attempting to resolve the problems in the minds of the objectors. They pointed out that as far as services are concerned, the entire area within the borough will be treated alike.

Sewers, lights, streets and other facilities will be given the same consideration. They did add that it will take time to integrate the two areas.

John Toppin, member of the Borough Authority, also answered questions, seeking to help clear questions concerning sewer installations. He emphasized that exact costs could not at this time be quoted. Engineer's examinations and financial costs would need to be investigated before such questions could be answered.

He did point out that the Florin area residents would be involved directly only in the cost of laying lines and only indirectly in the cost of the sewage disposal plant—an advantage to that area, for the plant is about one-third of the total cost now to Mt. Joy.
