Talking Aloud To Yourself? That's Good!
Start talking! So advises Keystone Automobile Club in a list of suggestions for motorists who take long trips by themselves.
"In such cases," says Edward P. Curran, Safety Director of Keystone, "talking to yourself is downright sensible. It's the best way to relieve fatigue and boredom and the mind-wandering that often lead to traffic accidents."
"Monotony is a deadly and always increasing highway problem, especially because of the rapidly spreading networks of expressways and turnpikes. Driving along these super highways can be hypnotic to many persons and all drivers should be alert in combatting such factors."
"If you get tired of talking to yourself... start singing! A good round tune loudly sung will keep you wide awake. And it's good for your whole mental outlook, too."
Of course, you'll probably tire of singing, too. When you do, turn on the car radio and turn up the volume. Vary your driving speed occasionally, stop to eat lightly and frequently, and take out time every so often just to get out of the car and stretch your muscles.
"Remember... to stay alive you must stay awake!"
Bulletin advertisement pays.
