What Is It?

What is it that makes a man not only willing but anxious to get up in the middle of the night and answer an emergency call for someone he probably does not know?

... go out in freezing and rainy weather to help someone who has closed his eyes to common sense and safety rules, thereby causing a fire or accident? ... incur the wrath of his wife by leaving a half-eaten meal to answer an emergency call?

... go out at night and on week-ends to knock on doors and ask for contributions for equipment to keep up this work?

... spend his free time in class and at drills learning fire fighting and first aid, then, when he becomes an instructor, spend more of his free time teaching others?

... do all this without pay of any kind, even having to pay dues to his own organization for the privilege of serving?

When we find this priceless ingredient we will have identified the most important factor in the making of a good volunteer fireman and rescue squadman.
