Well, Charles V. it seems, like so many of us, was a lit- tle late in acquiring wisdom.

His experience reminds me particularly of the tactics of our modern labor union czars Possessed of as much power as Charles V wielded, they seek to use it in the same way as he did—through force.

They lump all industrial situa- tions together and apply one formula to them all—"meet our demands or we'll shut you down."

And some dignitaries go a- round patting these union la- bor monarchs on the back and saying, "Go to it, boys, We're with you."

But Jesus didn't go at things that way. Jesus said, "I, if I be lifted up from the earth (signifying that death he should die), will draw all men unto me."

Notice that Jesus said, "I'll draw." But, like Charles V., our modern despots say, "We'll drive." However, in the long run, it is the drawing power—not the driving pow- er—that best organizes soci- ety. When are we going to learn that simple truth?
