Our little town like all other communities had a taste of pioneer living, be-cause of the storm. We were without telephone service, light and heat for two days. Those who were fortunate in having heat and gas ranges invited neighbors in for meals and lodging.

The fire house was opened to anyone who wanted to go there to cook meals. Some of the members of the Fire Co. secured oil stoves for the homes where there was illness and were ready to help wherever needed.

After the power was re-stored late Friday and we were beginning to be com-fortable, the next calamity befell us on Saturday morn-ing - no water. Someone "goofed" when they said there was enough water in the storage tank to supply us until the power lines to the pumping station could be repaired.

We were kept busy carry-ing in snow to melt for wa-ter. At least the snow was good for one thing. After many headaches and much anxiety our water supply was restored about 7 p.m.

...with JAMES C. INGEBRESEN President, Spiritual Mobilization ONLY 10% ESSENTIAL? A short time ago, when the East Coast was buried under a record snowfall, the White House approved a one-day leave of absence for "all Federal personnel in met-ropolitan Washington area not required for absolutely essential duties." District of Columbia Engineer Commis-sioner A. C. Welling report-edly said he hoped the number of essential workers would not total more than 10% of the 235 Federal work force in the Washington ar- ea. And, if you ask me, I suspect Mr. Welling's esti- mate was about right. At that, taxpaying readers (and who isn't these days?) might find a ray of sunshine behind all the snow. Some of our taxes seem to be go- ing for essential services - if only ten cents on the dol- lar. What we need is a good, full-time, snow-making ma- chine to keep the 90% of employees not "absolutely essential" permanently out of Washington. Does anyone know of a better way to force our over- grown Federal political ap- paratus back into the mold hammered out for it by our Founding Fathers? PRINT 1000 ENVELOPES Like Last Time.
