Sprout Looking Forward To Playing In California

Walter Derr, Main street resident of Florin who he felt that he had tried "anywhere" to buy a snow shovel but that the 60-61 sales on that particular item had been running far ahead of the merchants' expectation that he had been able to find one anywhere.

He had shopped Mount Joy, Elizabethtown and Lancaster and had no luck. However, he found one merchant who said, "I have ordered a day or two before the Feb. 24th deadline and head west for what he hopes will be a good opportunity for his baseball career.

Last fall he was traded by the Detroit Tigers, who originally signed him into the season to get under way. In the meantime, he is one of the brand little weight and boost his new baseball teams to be placed in the big league circuit.

Bob said this week that he feels this trade may be an opportunity for him to be competing against what he termed "older and younger" men for a spot on the California L. A. squad.

He explained that there are a few of the "middle" fellows who are in the high school pitching ace, and who would be, perhaps, better seasoned for the available places on the hurling staff.

However, what is in store for him during the 1961 season depends upon the spring training season and how he looks to his new owners for what he hopes will be a good opportunity for his baseball career.

He is "looking forward" to the new situation and is eager for the season to get under way. In the meantime, he is one of the brand little weight and boost his new baseball teams to be placed in the big league circuit.

Heavy Outlays for Aid to Polio Victims Cause Drain on March of Dimes Funds

"The National Foundation has the distinction and the honor of having exhausted its March of Dimes funds for patient aid," Basil O'Connor, its president, announced recently.

"Therefore, the March of Dimes has a $45 million job to do in 1961," he added.

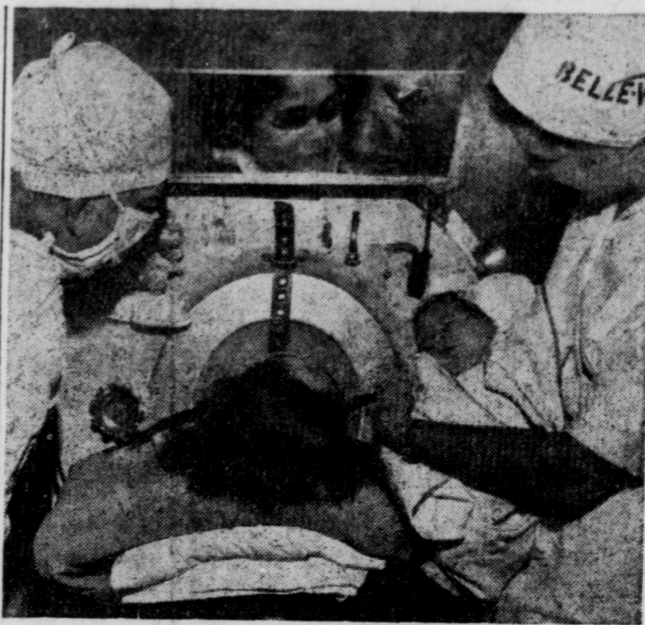

"But we always have had a tremendous job to do and have relied on the American people for financial support through the March of Dimes each January," he said. "At the same time, however, we do not live just from year to year but build broad research, educational and patient-aid programs for much longer periods. Continuation of these programs will require $45 million in 1961."

Speaking of the "urgent monetary needs of the 1961 New March of Dimes," to be held Jan. 2-31, the leader of the world's largest voluntary health organization explained that in 1960 about one-third of its 3,100 chapters had gone into debt to meet hospital and other bills for aid to polio patients.

"But our chapters are proud that they have not built up bank balances at the expense of human lives," he said.

Since 1938, when The National Foundation (for Infantile Paralysis) was organized, a total of $325,200,000 has been spent for direct patient aid to polio victims. In 1960, the bill was about $13,250,000 for some 40,000 of the polio-stricken. Although the Salk vaccine has been available to the public for five years, patient-aid costs remain high chiefly for those stricken before the vaccine was developed, or for those who since 1958 neglected to get inoculated and thus contracted polio.

March of Dimes monetary assistance to individual polio sufferers has sometimes been extremely great. To cite two instances only, patient-aid costs in the case of Mrs. Ingeborg Cully, of New York City, thus far have totaled about $25,000 and end is not in sight; while expenditures for Tommy Examples: $25,000 was spent on Ingeborg Cully ...

Davy, six years old, of Boston, have reached $50,000.

Aside from the enormous financial toll in patient aid, substantial New March of Dimes contributions must also be used for research. Since 1938 The National Foundation has allocated $64,600,000 on its broad-based international research program which has produced, among other outstanding achievements, the Salk and Sabin polio vaccines and, incidentally, two Nobel prizes. In 1960, research funds are estimated at $5,000,000 covering The National Foundation's three health areas of birth defects, arthritis and polio.

More than twice that sum, or $10,400,000, is needed for research in 1961.

March of Dimes contributions have also made possible the largest education program for the training of medical and health experts ever attempted by a voluntary health agency. Since 1939, when The National Foundation launched its program of professional education, outlays in this field have totaled $34,900,000; in 1960, total of $1,500,000 in March of

Papers From Old House Tell Of Changes - And Similarities In The News

What one finds in an old building when it is being razed always is a source of interest and the old brick is interesting to note that belonging to the in 1889 William Kuhn had this commission, with the One day recently Vic Schlegelmich was vice-president, have been pre-Koser brought to the Bulletin; J. The article about the building, known as the old Mart Brubaker home was the first president of just east of the church will be taken down because the most enthusiastic church trustees feel that it is not in a sufficiently good enough state of repairs to justify remodeling.

The papers actually represent a rather lengthy span of history—from 1882 to 1925—but all emphasize that Family Herald, published in all, it is constant change.

For instance, in a copy of the Mount Joy Herald, dated Jan. 15, 1889, men's suits and hats were being offered for sale at $7.50 to $16.

But, some things do not change. The same paper tells of a "fell Sunday night" and a woman's pocketbook had been lost between Bowman's "Herald of Truth," published by Miss store and Eby's bakery. ## FLORIN Fishing Exhibits Increased At '61 Sportmen's Show

Wide public acceptance has made it necessary to include two additional live fishing exhibits in the 1961 Pennsylvania Recreation and Sportsmen's Show which opens February 6 at the Farm Show Building in Harrisburg. The show has a six day run, closing on Saturday, February 11.

Anxious anglers will be able to try their luck at three live fishing exhibits, with each fisherman being allowed to keep his catch. Two of the exhibits will be filled with live trout; the third will contain both northern pike and channel catfish. Over the past few years the live fishing exhibit has grown in popularity until last year's show was just unable to meet the demand of the hundreds and hundreds of fishermen who continually jammed this particular attraction. John Altland, managing director of the Show, said he hoped that the two additional live fishing exhibits will now permit every angler to pursue his or her favorite sport.

Fishermen are not the only ones coming in for special consideration at this year's Sportsmen's Show. More than 100 varied exhibits will display items with appeal to everyone interested in an outdoor sport or activity. Archery and hunting equipment, along with practical instructions and demonstrations in its use, will be shown. A complete travel section will enable visitors to gather information and so that they can plan hunting and fishing trips and annual vacations.

Generally speaking, Mt. Joy people have been doing good job keeping their sidewalks opened for foot traffic.

Winds may blow and clear next summer.
