Luncheon Meats Need Extra Care In Hot Weather

A few days in the refrigerator can give packaged luncheon meats an off-flavor, extension nutrition special.

Although these bacteria affect the flavor and odor of foods, they are not harmful to a person's health. Psychrophilic bacteria thrive at the usual household refrigerator temperatures of 40 degrees, but they won't grow at temperatures below freezing.

Before storing in the freezer, wrap packages of luncheon meat so they are airtight using aluminum foil or other freezer wrapping material. Proper wrapping is essential to keep the meat from drying out even though it is kept in the freezer for only a few days. When stored in the freezer, luncheon meat will be fresh tasting. Take out only what meat will be used at one time—do not refreeze once you've taken it from the freezer.

ABUNDANT LIFE

By ORAL ROBERTS
OPEN UP TO GOD

Recently a good friend of mine spoke in the Abundant Life Auditorium. He is a distinguished surgeon, highly respected in the medical field. Dr. William S. Reed is also a vestryman in the Episcopal Church.

When he spoke in Tulsa, the people were amazed at the extent of his understanding and belief in abundant life.

"God has given men gifts of healing, wisdom and discernment," said Dr. Reed in his address. "These are the attributes every doctor and patient want. These are the signs of health and wholeness. I remember one particular patient whom I helped through God's gift of wisdom."

"It had been proved by other competent physicians that the man had leukemia. Everything proved it. I accepted the diagnosis myself in complete negativism. When the patient sought medicospiritual help, we prayed to God, Heavenly Father, heal this man who has given his heart and soul to thee." God answered our prayer, but it didn't happen the way you might think. God gave, in this instance, not the gift of healing but the gift of wisdom. Six days after I first saw the patient, God said to me, during the time of prayer in church one Sunday night, "What if he doesn't have leukemia?" It was just as if a blackboard had been erased. He said, "Now, let's start afresh. Here are the signs; here are the symptoms."

"So God helped because both the man and I opened up to Him. We didn't try to limit Him in the way He solved our problem."

Let us open up to God as Dr. Reed suggested. My friend, I know God wants to give you more than you have. He wants you to be more than you are. He wants to give you abundant life because He is a good God.

Jesus Christ is the answer to all your problems. Open up to God today. Start your life abundant in Him, now!
