Careful, Drivers Of Shoppers This Season

With Christmas shopping off to an early start this year and downtown areas becoming more densely populated by the day, Keystone Automobile Club yesterday directed an appeal for "more alertness, politeness and cooperation" to pedestrians and motorists alike.

The appeal was made by Edward P. Curran, Keystone's Safety Director, who pointed particularly to the dangers inherent in early darkness, thoughtlessness and seasonal diversions.

"Shoppers already are beginning to crowd the shopping districts' sidewalks and auto-truck traffic is keeping pace," he declared. "Drivers must be more than usually careful in such areas and particularly at heavily traveled intersections, where bundled buyers can be expected to do the unexpected."

"Many who go downtown for their holiday shopping are unaccustomed to the great crowds of people and the clogged traffic arteries and must be watched for, particularly. Elderly persons offer obvious hazards to drivers, to be sure, and children are awfully quick to run or jump into trouble."

"Cooperation of walkers and drivers will help immeasurably to make safety more certain for all. Extra caution and concern for the other fellow' also will pay dividends in public-personal relationships when hurly-burly activities often induce too many to be forgetful and less than polite."

"The approaching holiday season is a happy, carefree time. All of us should do our utmost to keep it so."

Failure to drain garden hoses before storing them may result in the hoses bursting from ice pressure.
