THIS PENCIL IS FREE

A "copy" pencil is an indispensable "tool" of the newspaper trade. It is free—not from a price standpoint, but in a broader and more vital sense. In the hands of the newspaper people of the free world, it writes freely of the events and issues of the day, unhampered, undistorted, uncensored.

Sometimes there are pressures brought to bear on this pencil, blunting the point, blurring the facts. But the point has always been resharpened again. That's why Americans are the world's best-informed people, and it naturally follows, the world's freest.

Your electric company, on the occasion of the National Newspaper Week, salutes the newspapers in its service area for exercising the responsibilities that go with a free press in a free nation.
