"EASY PARKING"

More Courtesy Helps Driving

With Christmas shopping off to its traditional early start and downtown areas becoming more densely populated by the day, Keystone Automobile Club directed an appeal for "more alertness, politeness and cooperation" among pedestrians and motorists alike.

The appeal was made by Edward Curran, Keystone's Safety Director, who pointed particularly to the dangers inherent in early darkness, thoughtlessness and personal preoccupation with seasonal diversions.

"Shoppers already are beginning to crowd the shopping districts' sidewalks and auto-truck traffic is keeping pace", he declared. "Drivers must be more than usually careful in such areas and particularly at heavily traveled intersections, where bundle-laden buyers can be expected to do the unexpected."

"Many who go downtown for their holiday shopping are unaccustomed to the great crowds of people and the clogged traffic arteries and must be watched for, particularly. Elderly persons offer obvious hazards to drivers, to be sure, and children are awfully quick to run or jump into trouble."

"Cooperation of walkers and drivers will help immeasurably to make safety more certain for all. Extra caution and concern for 'the other fellow' also will pay dividends in public-personal relationships when hurly-burly activity often induces
