tions; more land more buildings, and more livestock and dairy units do not always mean more net return. With surplus production in many farm commodities the idea of expansion should be studied carefully. In many cases it is not good farming to produce more products than the consuming public can handle; this has been the trouble in many enterprises. We are of the opinion that it is best to concentrate on the most efficient production per unit of a size that can be handled without too much expansion. Many cows, hens, and acres are capable of still greater production if managed prop-

THE EASTER Market is usually one of the best times to sell spring lambs for the highest price per pound. Local sheep producers that have early lambs and want to try to have them ready for Easter should make use of creep feeding; this area where only the lambs can get to the feed trough, will increase gains and get them to heavier weights in a shorter time. Additional grain to the milking ewes daily will increase the milk flow and push the lambs. Creep feeders containing two parts of cracked corn and one part of whole oats will be attractive to the lambs. The lamb market at Easter time warrants special attention.
