Hiram Detwiler, S. Delta street, suffered an attack a few days ago and is a patient in the Lancaster General hospital. He is in room 549.

MAYTOWN

Miss Grace Henderson

Joseph Huntzinger celebrated his birthday anniversary last Tuesday.

Mary Jane Sager celebrated her ninth birthday anniversary last Tuesday.

Mrs. James Miller, Landisville, visited Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Huntzinger last Wednesday.

Adrienne Reynolds, Lancaster, spent the weekend with her aunt Mary Witmer.

In a message from Airman Larry E. Henderson from Ft. Worth, Texas, he stated they had at least 12 inches of snow last Thursday. This was the largest accumulation known since the first weather records were kept in 1913. Larry was very happy to see the snow.

As it was elsewhere, so it was in Maytown—too much snow. The people who cleared the sidewalks did not know what to do with the snow. It was quite amusing to watch Charlie and Ronnie Johns digging out their cars and trying to clear a space large enough to park the family's three cars. Charlie shoveled the snow from the street to the sidewalk and Ronnie shoveled it from there to their yard. What a pile of snow they had when finished!

The annual congregational meeting was held at the United Church of Christ Wednesday evening.

Achievement tests were given at the Maytown Elementary School last week. Conference with parents are scheduled for Wednesday, Jan. 29. On this day the people will stay at home and the parents will go to school.

Mrs. Linda Michner is a patient in St. Joseph's hospital.

The annual congregational meeting of St. John's Lutheran Church was held Sunday evening at the church.

Miss Marija Jemenejs, Caracas, Venezuela, is a guest of the Rev. and Mrs. Ronald Pierson.

Look Behind The Scenes At New Bank

By The Editor

Well, I sat in the director's chair!

Yes, sir, Monday afternoon while on a special tour through the new Lancaster County Farmers National bank building I sat in the place at the director's table which belongs to Mount Joy's official management connection.

Like all the other chairs around the big, new oval table, S. Nissley Gingrich's chair had a brass name plate attached to the back.

Thus, as members of the press—following a luncheon at the Hamilton club—toured the building, they could call the roll of top management by simply walking around the table and reading off the names.

Invitation to have a preview of the activities in Lancaster's newest banking house came to our office because Mount Joy is directly involved. Two of L.C.F.N.B.'s 11 banks are in Mount Joy.

What does one see when a bank is opened?

Naturally, the new bank building—new and sparkling, plush and fresh, modern and attractive. But, additionally, one sees money. For instance, one of the four directors—a vice-president, no less—showed us a $1,000 bill.

Church Women met at the home of Mrs. Rose Neiman on Monday evening.

"Does anyone know whose picture appears on this big bill?" he asked showing us only the back.

No one knew. It was then that he indicated that had anyone had the correct answer they would have won the bill as a prize for special knowledge.

He allowed a few reporters, whose eyes were as green as Cleveland's picture, to gently fondle the money—all the while the hovering bank cashier kept an alert eye on the Fourth Estate.

What else impressed the press? Most everything. The size of the oil tank and the number of pretty girls.

Fantastic electronic devices do the work, the girls, however also were busy—too busy to give the news reporters a second look.

A few workmen still were busy in the corridors. One was seen with a file in his hand. He was standing near a vault door. Security gave him another checkout—which he passed.

Money-hungry newsmen ogled the rows and rows of safety deposit boxes in one of the six big vaults and wondered how many hundreds or thousands, or hundreds of thousands of dollars worth of treasures were locked inside. While the guides had prompt answers to most all questions, that matter defied any possible supposition.

We enjoyed seeing two local banking people busy at their desks—Miss Lois Miller and Robert Sherk, both of whom were familiar faces in Mount Joy.

Whom else did we see? Generally speaking that's it but we were reminded that many of the areas we were treading are not usually open to the public.

No one was searched as we left the hallowed halls of $96,000,000 but reporters who traditionally count themselves lucky to rub one side of George Washington against the other did move with awe and fitting respect.

We did note one other thing—most of the writers took special notes of who and how to see the people in the individual loan department.

PLAN DANCE

MISS TEEN AGER

... answers questions about Junior Miss etiquette, grooming and interests.

Q. How do you handle a phone call gracefully if a boy calls when you're entertaining another date? What if you like the guy on the phone better than the one in the living room?

A. No matter who you like best, it's a matter of basic dating manners not to chat on the phone when you have a guest. When the phone rings, be brief. Tell him you have a guest and can talk only a minute. And remember—the same principle holds if that guest is a girl friend.

Q. My parents have agreed that I can use makeup on special occasions. What color foundation is best to start out with? A friend of mine uses a deep tan and it looks great on her. Are dark tones the most flattering?

A. What looks good on your friend may be wrong for you. The safest and surest way to select a flattering foundation is to choose a color closest to your own natural skin tone. There are three basic skin tones: rose, beige and ivory. Take a good, hard look at yourself in daylight and decide where you fit in the color scale. Rose-toned skins are warm complexions, brushed with a tint of pink. Beige-toned skins include complexions with light tan, olive and golden tints. Ivory-toned skins are a creamy white gardenia. Another word about foundation and makeup in general. Practice makes perfect — so experiment in private before you make your first public appearance.

Q. When you're invited to dinner at a friend's home, is it necessary to bring a gift? My parents invited a friend of mine to dinner and she brought a box of candy. I've been to her home several times, but never brought a gift. Was I impolite?

A. If the invitation is just a casual . . . "stay for dinner," a gift would be out of place. But if the dinner is a special occasion, and the invitation is given well in advance, a small hostess gift is both appropriate and thoughtful. The gift should never be elaborate (it's the thought that counts), and gifts of food are always in good taste. Next time you're invited to a special dinner, why not make up a batch of fudge, or your favorite cookies? Demonstrate your artistic talents by packing the cookies in a colorful box that is a gift in itself. For example: cover a shoe box with pink Marvalon adhesive covering, line it with white adhesive and trim the lid with white daisy cutouts. This type of hostess gift rates you tops as a guest.
