teacher in the entire school system.

For 5-year-olds have absorbed profanity and gossip and even sex terms that they may not fully comprehend. But they may then casually employ them in ordinary school conversation.

So you fathers better better watch your language; and you mothers likewise should instill cultural ideas and moral ideals into your tots before they are even ready for Nursery School.

For their absorbent minds can take in far more than you mothers anticipate.

Beware about discoloring your child's frank scientific open mind with bias of any sort.

And don't show fright at snakes or lightning or the dark, for your youngsters will often mimic or imitate (Turn to page 8)

The Worry Clinic

Judy is a dandy example of the unintentional teaching that parents indulge in. Before your child enters school, you have not only implanted food likes and dislikes, but hundreds of other vital emotional, religious and cultural attitudes. To be sure they are positive and good, send for the "Parents' Tests" below.

CASE O-460: Judy Jacobson, aged 5, is a precocious little girl who lives in Wisconsin Rapids, Wisconsin.

One day she was riding in the front seat beside Rev. E. Duane Hulse, the popular pastor of her parents' church.

Judy happened to notice a road map on the seat beside her. It carried the emblem of the gasoline company which had printed it.

"Is that the kind of gas you use?" she asked Rev. Hulse.

The pastor replied with a cordial "Yes".

"We use Filler-Up" Judy immediately replied.

So Judy thus believed that slogan was the brand name for a certain type of gasoline.

You have often heard the old saying that "Little pitchers have big ears", meaning that youngsters overhear a great deal more than most of us adults give them credit for.

It would be most illuminating to parents if they could take the role of the usual kindergarten teacher for a few days.

Kindergarten teachers thus get a more intimate viewpoint of family life in a community than any other
