

Dust can kill you. If you drive a lot on unpaved roads, you know what we mean. Flying dust from the car ahead can cut off your view of the car coming your way. A dusty windshield can distort your vision, especially at night. Drive carefully if you find yourself on an unpaved road that has not been treated with chemicals to make it dustfree.

Keep Snacks From the Kids

Try to find the cause if you have a feeding problem with a preschool child, suggests Louise W. Hamilton, extension nutrition specialist at the Penn State University.

Getting a child to eat at mealtime may not be so hard as you think. If you have a healthy child, he'll want to eat. But he won't be hungry if he's always snacking during the day.

One way to see that a child is ready to eat at mealtime is to serve him foods at regular times. Some children need to eat more often than others, Miss Hamilton points out.

Your child will eat the foods you prepare if he thinks they are appealing. He may not like spicy or mixed-up foods, such as stews or casseroles. Since children are usually suspicious of new foods, introduce them one at a time.

Preschoolers find it hard to pick up peas, corn, and other small pieces of food unless they can push them into a food such as mashed potatoes. Because it seems hard for them to chew pieces of meat, they may prefer meat that is ground up.

Sometimes you can't trace a feeding problem to meal preparation, says Miss Hamilton. It can result from a poor emotional climate at the table, such as spilling milk or kicking another child.

Being a good example probably will help you get the best results since children like to copy adult actions. If you are downcast, fussy, or gripe at the table, your child will act this way, too, Miss Hamilton adds.
