The Worry Clinic

Matthew duplicated Adam's clever invention in the ancient Garden of Eden. Scrapbook this case and will you parents please heed the advice about Bible story reading at bedtime? Also, send for the vital booklet below, which will help insure your child the know-how to enter college!

CASE P-487: Matthew, aged 3 1/2, is our daughter Judy's oldest child.

Judy reads Bible stories to her children at bedtime.

Recently she gave them the story of the Garden of Eden. She explained how the Serpent had caused Eve to violate God's commandment to avoid eating the forbidden fruit.

A few days later Judy was watching her two older boys as they played in the backyard.

She saw Matthew strike his younger brother Peter.

So Judy opened the back door and sharply called Matthew into the house.

"Why did you strike Peter?" she demanded. "I saw you hit your little brother, so what made you do it?"

Matthew looked downcast. "Mother," he began, "that mean old Serpent just whispered in my ear."

Judy could hardly suppress a smile.

For Matthew had hit upon Adam's great invention of buck-passing.

You Bible scholars may recall that God sharply demanded of Adam why Adam had tasted the forbidden fruit.

Adam was thus on the spot. It was mankind's first attempt at worrying out a solution to a crucial problem.

But Adam came up with a super duper answer. For Adam passed the buck.

Notice Adam's exact reply, as quoted from Genesis 3:12 in the Bible;

"... The woman whom thou gavest to be with me, she gave me of the tree, and I did eat."

So God turned to the woman and asked, "What is this
