

ROSE GROWERS are gull

can easily forget about the spray program on the rose Black spot or powdery mildew control requires regular spraying until freezing weather; if these diseases are allowed to set in and defoliate parts of the rose bushes, will weaken the plant and severe winter killing will occur. One of the best preventive measures against winter killing is to have strong, healthy plants start with. The regular spray program with maneb or fupet is strongly advised until the plants become dormant.

AS WE ENTER the final quarter of our calendar year I would like to stress the real value of a good set of accurate farm records. The great majority of today's farmers are keeping some type of farm accounts; but the question arises, "Are they accurate and complete?" This is very important for many reasons; not merely for income tax purposes but for the real value of planning next year's operations and in making important decisions. More management is very important to everyone; accurate farm records can reveal the loop-holes and the profitable enterprises in the farm operation. As the cropping year closes and as we approach the new year, we urge farmers to take time to study and evaluate their farm records
