

92 Visits 103-Year-Old Brother In York

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Shaef-fer, West Donegal street, accompanied by Mr. Shaef-fer's mother, Mrs. Fentie Shaef-fer, were in York on Sunday to visit with the elder Mrs. Shaef-fer's brother, William Waltermyer. Mrs. Shaef-fer, 92, and her brother, 103, had not seen each other for several years.

Mr. Waltermyer, York's oldest resident, was born July 4, 1861. Although in bed most of the time, he eats and sleeps well. A talented musician through the active part of his life, he played with a number of bands, and still enjoys very much playing a mouth organ, which he can do in lively fashion, without music of any kind.

Mr. Waltermyer has been recognized for his unusual longevity several times in the past few years. He has letters of congratulations from former presidents Eisenhower and Kennedy, and also from Pennsylvania's governors, Mr. Scranton and Mr. Lawrence.

Thinking to send him a gift after they returned home, Mr. Shaef-fer asked a nurse if he could eat candy. "Oh yes," she replied. "He eats anything and everything and it doesn't bother him at all. Candy, by all means!"

Another sister, Mrs. Howard Bailey, 98, also lives in York. Mrs. Fentie Shaef-fer lives with a daughter, Mrs. Henry Stauffer, at 36 West Main, Mount Joy.

discussion of the issues has degenerated into a first-class mess. The well of ideas ran dry, the pump broke and all that could be brought up was a filthy mess of name calling which abuses the usual privilege Americans take of "enjoying" their political campaigns.

Every man and woman who is registered should go to the polls next Tuesday and vote his convictions. Thereby he helps to clear our national conscience of the questionable methods we have used to reach a decision.
