Worry Clinic

(From page 6)

Later, Tommy timidly inquired how she knew he had broken the fish bowl, for she was at the neighbor's and couldn't possibly have seen him.

"Oh, a little bird tells mamma such things," glibly replied his parent.

And toddlers actually believe there must be some such "little birds" that tattle on them.

In fact, I have seen youngsters hunting that "little bird" with their bow and arrow or BB guns!

Older children and adults can see that Tommy's mother made a simple logical deduction, as follows:

(1) Tommy was the only freely movable object in house.

(2) No earthquake or other cataclysm of nature intervened to break the goldfish bowl.

(3) Ergo, Tommy simply MUST have done it!

This bit of logic looks transparently clear to us adults. But to a pre-school child, it is Greek or X-Y-Z stuff.

For such youngsters are incapable of our adult logical deductions.

That is why the toddler not only views us adults as actual giants in physical size with omnipotent strength. But we also seem omniscient, for we can tell him things that he does even when we are out of the house!
It is thus no problem for a child to believe in fairies and giants. For he really lives in a giant world.
Is it any wonder, therefore, why a child's favorite storybook hero is a dwarf or pigmy or Hop O' My Thumb? For he quickly identifies himself with the tiny hero and is gleeful when such a little person finally defeats the giant.
By "empathy" the child thus relishes having an elf turn the tables on us adult giants!

MAKE COMPOST

Leaves from shade trees & shrubs can be made into compost. After decaying, this material forms an excellent mold for repotting house plants, or topdressing around choice perennials, says Linc Pearson, extension flower specialist at Penn State U.
