the six big Messerschmitt Belgian horses get hitched to a huge yellow wagon, ready for the parade in the arena Thursday night.

Another little girl got her first sight of a milking machine as she watched a farmer milk his prize cow right in the midst of general confusion!

A woman of our acquaintance said she goes to the Farm Show only for the baked potatoes! (We agree with her that they are definitely one of the Farm Show's highlights!) Also exceptionally good are the pressed turkey and chicken sandwiches, the huge "subs", the beautiful apples and the milk shakes!

Quilts, aprons, beautiful canned goods, clothing, flower arrangements, samples of grain and produce—all are at the Farm Show.

To some, it is simply a place to go to be "excused" from school for a day. Others, like a doctor we know, go to see examples of plantings or products which they are considering buying.

From the speed with which they cover the territory, and the blank look in their eyes, some young couples, holding hands, must go just as a lark, and because "everybody's doing it!"

But for whatever the reason, thousands DO attend, and the Pennsylvania Farm Show is an "institution" which we hope will be around for many, many years to come!

Some observations on the 1965 show: "Shoe boots" for women are really at a zenith of popularity — almost every woman there had on a pair!

A new refrigerator-freezer we saw was quite intriguing. It had a "built-in" look, with a counter top between the top section, which was a refrigerator, and the bottom section, which was a huge, pull-out deep freeze!

While visiting briefly with Paul Z. Martin of Blue Ball and Clyde Wolgemuth of R2, Manheim, we learned that the attractive young lady who led the big parade on her handsome palomino horse on Thursday night, is not only an accomplished 4-H horsewoman, but also a budding auctioneer!

Although only 18 years old, she has had training at an auctioneers' school, and is an apprentice in her family's auction house near Carlisle, Pa. She expects to have her full license as soon as she is 21!

Protect Important Papers

Important family records, ranging from birth certificates to tax records and wills, should be kept where they are both safe and readily accessible, reminds Helen E. Bell, extension home management specialist at Penna. State University.

Some papers require the security of a safe deposit box. Among these are birth certificates, church records, military records, marriage and divorce documents, employment information, mortgages, contracts and debt notes, bonds, stock certificates, automobile title, and wills.

You can group other important papers into these 3 areas:

1. Some you should carry with you include identification, health records, insurance cards, and organization memberships.

2. "Retired records" to be stored in a permanent file at home include guarantees and warranties, insurance policies, real estate ownership papers, tax records, and education records. Such papers are not quite worthy of a safe deposit box.

3. Some papers should be in a current file in your home for ready reference. Among these are household inventories, instruction manuals for appliances & equipment, bank passbooks, and information you may need if you were to fill out a long-form income tax return.

Drive Carefully With Kids

Driving with children calls for extra precautions by the driver, says Keystone Automobile Club in stressing some of the dangers which can be avoided.

Emphasizing the driver's added responsibilities because of the presence of children in the car, Edward P. Curran, Safety Director of Keystone, gave the following advice:

1. Never leave children unsupervised in a car, even though it's "just for a minute". Never leave the motor running while parked. Take keys with you.
2. Never start a car until you know that no children are in its path, front or back.
3. Don't allow children to stand up while riding, teach them to sit still.
4. Don't allow babies to be carried on someone's lap in the front seat. Keep babies in the rear seat, or in a baby carrier.

5. Make sure car doors are locked so children can't open them accidentally. Teach children to leave door handles alone.

6. If children start quarreling, pull off the road and stop before trying to settle things.

7. Don't permit children to stick heads or arms from car windows.

8. Teach children not to touch steering wheel, gearshift lever or buttons, and rear-view mirror, or otherwise distract the driver while car is in motion.

9. Remember that the front passenger seat is by far the most dangerous in the car. Do not overload it.

EDUCATIONAL T.V.

Donegal high school students are viewing educational television, channel 33, in some of their history and Problems of Democracy classes. Martin Shenk and Donald Staley have added to the interest of their classes with such programs in the field of Pennsylvania History and Government as Tree of Peace, The Holy Experiment, A Heritage of Faith, and Westward Ho The Conestoga Wagon.

The Problems of Democracy class is supplemented with a humanities course. Topics in this course have been Thornton Wilder's "Our Town" and selections from Shakespearean plays.

Eventually we are all compelled to buckle down to a long, hard grind.
