came home. "It was quite different from antique shows around here," she told us. "It was huge, and the furniture was mostly French provincial, antique of course; the objects on display were Chinese or foreign imports, brass, silver, bronze, pewter, etc.

"One whole booth was of Tiffany glass, its weird shapes spotlighted and silhouetted against a background of black velvet! We called it 'the chamber of horrors'!"

"There weren't the beautiful Pennsylvania Dutch cupboard, the corner cupboards, the handpainted china, ironstone plates, pressed glass and primitive wood objects that make the shows in this area so interesting!"

The new auto license plates made their debut in Mount Joy on Monday. Bright yellow they are, with blue letters and numbers, a fresh and welcome sight after the dark and battered plates which have been used for the past six years!

We heard of an interesting coincidence: Miss Betty Charles, Pinkerton Rd., was sent her initials on her new license plates, just by chance. She had made no effort whatever to secure anything other than a run-of-the-mill plate. But it came through "BC - - - -"

For many years we had the provocative license plate "QC 2222". More recently, for six years, we have had our initials, "RR221." In the new plate, however, we have no "claim to fame" at all — just a nondescript "A90-355!"

Twice in recent weeks we have reported that a non-blooming philodendron has bloomed! Dr. David Schlosser and Henry G. Carpenter had gorgeous blossoms on the large philodendrons in their solariums!

Now, "seconds is thirds," for, surprisingly, last week we discovered a "blossom" on a potted philodendron in our dining room window — a plant that has never bloomed before in eight years we have had it!

Mount Joy's air, water and sunshine MUST have a "bit o' magic" in them!

And now, a tip of the Irish top hat to a little St. Patrick's Day girl, Andrea McCue, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George McCue, West Donegal street, who celebrated her eighth birthday on Wednesday, March 17th!

YOUR LEGISLATOR'S REPORT

By RICHARD A. SNYDER

State Senator, Lancaster Co. Residents of Bellefonte who were going to bed later than usual on nights, some years ago, would notice that their electric light dimmed momentarily, and then brightened again.

At that instant, in nearby Rockview, the executioner had pulled the Switch which sent a convicted murder to his death in the electric chair. It was a grim reminder of legalized killing by the State in punishment of crime.

I suspect the power system is now modernized so that the neighbors of the prison no longer see the impact of the electrocution so dramatically, but the issue of whether to eliminate capital punishment is still very much with us. A number of other states are voting this year to end it.

An effort to abolish the death penalty is before us again in a bill sponsored by Senator Mullin (D-Philadelphia), who amiably offers an assortment of well-worn ideas each session.

In the House it is proposed by Representatives Worley (R-Adams) and Musto (D-Luzerna).

There is honest difference of view on this issue. Some years ago, as a newspaperman in line of duty, I witnessed an execution in Sing Sing prison, New York, and the cold medieval horror of the death chamber, with the prisoner dragged in, strapped to the chair, and the pungent odor of burned flesh constituted an unforgettable ten minutes.

Warden Lewis Lawes, who was in charge, was an advocate of doing away with it. So are many penologists.

Lieut. Governor Ray Shafer, in Lancaster recently, was asked what he thought about it at a press conference with school editors. His opinion is significant because he is chairman of the Board of Pardons, which has the duty of recommending or denying clemency in death cases. He said he favored keeping it as a deterrent to professional criminals and as a protection to prison staff, even though this penalty does not discourage the impulsive killer.

Police opinion deserves to be considered on this issue, too, because we look to police to risk their own lives in preserving law and order, and protecting the lives of the rest of us. On the whole, police want capital punishment retained. They feel it may save some innocent lives, and gives them some protection in their difficult work.

Over The Back Fence

by Max Smith

WE HEAR a good bit these days about the use of liquid fertilizers on our farm crops. I would like to stress that the value of any fertilizer depends somewhat upon the pounds of actual fertilizer per dollar spent. The three major elements, Nitrogen, Phosphorus, and Potash, are the important plant foods in most fertilizers. These elements when delivered in liquid form are quickly available to the plant and are easily utilized; however, the buyer should be sure to get a maximum amount of pounds of plant food for the money. We hear of the sales promotion program where a few gallons of liquid fertilizer per acre is being recommended to grow a good corn crop; it's the pounds of actual plant food applied per acre that is important. The spraying of the plant leaves (foliar) for the average farmer on farm crops is not practical because of the number of times required to do any good.

IF YOU are ordering your seed corn, don't forget that it is suggested that you plant silage corn from 2000 to 4000 plants thicker per acre than for grain corn. We have many dairy and livestock men that are placing more importance on corn silage as their main roughage feed. We should be aiming for at least 20 tons of corn silage per acre with normal moisture conditions. In order to do this we must get our population up to at least 18,000 plants on most of our fertile soils. The plan of buying a special silage corn is declining in popularity because research work shows that most good grain varieties will make very good silage corn; a good yield of grain along with normal stalk, rather than a big stalk and little grain, is the important objective for high quality silage.

I REALIZE that many farmers are looking forward to the job of trying to control insects on alfalfa this summer; the situation is a bit confused and uncertain, but we should try to be prepared to combat the alfalfa weevil when it appears. A number of chemicals have been recommended and the details are available upon request. Again I'd like to come back to the old saying that "an ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure". The application in this respect is to make every effort to have a fast-growing, healthy plant that will make maximum growth before the weevils appear, and also, one that can withstand pre-bloom cutting and give a quick re-growth. Adequate amounts of both phosphorus and potash are needed for alfalfa through one or more applications each year. The
