the Donegal Derby five years ago, and we hope it continues . . .

The comments concerning the antique "chest" which we bought several weeks ago and placed in the front office of the Bulletin have been many, interesting, and quite varied.

To our question, "What is it, and what do you think it was used for?" we have had many answers.

"It's a wine chest. My uncle in Pittsburgh had one like it and it was a very much, prized piece of furniture! The wine was kept in the lower part and the glasses up above."

"Nonsense," said the next visitor. "That's no wine chest! Its shelves aren't far enough apart! It looks like an Amish 'safe' to me!"

"On no, you're quite wrong!"

Serve as Guides At Annex Night

Twenty-eight boys and girls served as guides Tuesday night, Nov. 9, when the Donegal Annex held its "Back to School" night program for parents.

Improve Storage, Safety on Stairs

Convert your basement stairwell from a blank wall or unsafe open space to a useful, attractive storage area. A few hours' work and a small outlay of cash will do the job.

If there's a blank wall, simply add furring strips and cover them with a functional, attractive paneling.

Should the stairway be open, frame from stair treads to ceiling joists with 2x4-inch lumber and then cover with the perforated hardboard.

Metal or plastic fixtures will enable you to store everything from mops and brooms to hockey sticks on this handy wall. And it no longer will be a safety hazard.

Some families might prefer lining the open side of the stairway with built-ins

Take a good look at the package before you put it in your shopping cart and you can do a better job of food shopping, says Harold Neigh, Penn State extension consumer economics specialist. Be sure you can use the economy size package without letting the savings evaporate in the big box. Know whether you're willing to pay extra for specially designed packages.

A survey shows families with incomes over $10,000 worry about their health. Beats worrying about the rent.

a stander-by exclaimed. "It's a piece of lodge furniture, and stood at one of the 'stations' in a lodge hall used probably by several lodges. That's why it doesn't have the insigna of any ONE particular lodge on it!"

"It's an altar from a church!"

"It's an extra-fancy chest!"

And so it has gone. We enjoy the comments, and will continue our search for the real story of the beautiful "piece."

Incidentally, the drawer was locked when we got the piece, and we had no key. Our curiosity was aroused. WAT might the drawers contain? $1000 bills? Henry G. Carpenter, who has a fabulously large collection of keys in all sizes and shapes, brought over ones he thought might fit, but none opened the drawer.

We had almost given up hope of getting the drawer open, when Harold Keller, from whom we had bought the chest, discovered the key among his belongings! It is a heavy brass key, works perfectly, and is quite decorative!

(And, the drawer was empty except for a wooden finial which had broken off the front of the chest, and four small screws!)
