

The Worry Clinic

by Dr. Geo. W. Crane

Dr. Ross is the type of stalwart American who has made this great Republic the mecca for freedom loving folks all over the world. Contrast his with the goons and dimwits whom he has encountered in his 58 years of teaching. He's a ball of fire and a most articulate defender of "free enterprise."

CASE T-470: Dr. Galen Starr Ross is the peppery president of Capitol College.

He is short in stature but long on courage.

When he was only 16, he started teaching in a one-room school house, with about 35 pupils.

"It was one of those little red school houses," he told a combined Mercator-Optimist luncheon at Columbus, Ohio. "And in those days," Dr. Ross continued, "the ONLY place a school was 'red' was on the OUTSIDE."

About the middle of the morning, he called on the third graders for their reading lesson.

A little blonde girl, aged 8, got up to read. But a 17-year-old classmate, who was over 6 feet tall, yanked her down by jerking on her pigtails.

This big lug had driven 3 women teachers out of the school the previous year and a man teacher had lasted only a few weeks until young Dr. Ross took over.

"In those days," Dr. Ross told the luncheon crowd, "we didn't waste time consulting with the principal, for I was the only faculty member in the school building."

"And we didn't ask the County Superintendent for advice nor have a session with the School Board."

"Instead, the teacher had to act at once and solve each problem."

"Although this big lug was about a head taller, I calmly descended on him and cracked his thick skull with the butt end of my heavy pointer."

"After an encore, he jumped up and ran out of the schoolhouse, yelling bloody murder."

"So I called the third graders to order again and told them we'd get back to our reading lesson."

"But we hadn't gone along for more than 5 minutes when a girl at the back of the room got my attention.

"She said that this big lug was returning to the school, accompanied by his father who had a shotgun cradled in the crook of his arm."

"Whereupon, I went over to the woodbox back of the pot-bellied stove which was our source of heat."

"I selected a stick of wood about the size of my forearm and stationed myself by the door."

"When my visitor kicked open the door, I socked him over the head with that stick of wood."

"He went down like an ox, for I knocked him cold. Then I told his big lummo of a son to drag his paw homeward as he was, saying he could figure this out while unconscious just as easily as when he came to!"

"For a cardinal virtue of all education is the rule that a child must learn to mind!"

"Thereafter, I never had any more trouble at that school! For no military officer or teacher dares let himself be bullied."

Dr. Ross used strong methods but that big moron had previously driven four teachers off the job, so the issue had to be faced at once. Sometimes corporal punishment is most efficient!

BEWARE OF THE WALKING MAN

Beware of the man who walks out from behind parked cars. Beware of the man who walks off the curb in the middle of the block. Together, these men were involved in 59% of all pedestrian accidents last year. Be extra alert when you drive. Look for these men—and for all pedestrians at the mercy of your driving habits. After all, as soon as you get out of your car—you are a pedestrian. And you might be the walking man next time.

Pave Parking Lot

The 1965 summer street program in Mount Joy was finished Monday!

Completion of the season's work came with the surfacing of the east parking lot at the Pennsylvania Railroad station. The area is leased by the borough from the railroad for $1 per year.

A few days earlier the final street job was completed on Lumber between the railroad and David.

New curbs were necessary, utility poles needed to be moved and other delays combined to push the work to the end of the season.
