Church Movie
At Cross Roads

"Anything Can Happen!" is the title of a new 40-minute motion picture scheduled for public showing at Cross Roads Brethren in Christ Church, Feb. 8; 7:30 p.m. sponsored by the Men's Fellowship. Everybody is welcome.

Produced by the National Association of Evangelicals, the film is a candid probe into the attitudes and actions of Christians in today's churches. Characterized by some as startling, this new black and white documentary uses on-the-spot interviews in a concerned examination of church membership.

"Hunger for the power of God, desire for spiritual renewal, search for meaning—all thread through the varied reactions from Sunday school pupils, lay people and pastors," reports one reviewer. Opinions regarding the church today are gleaned from interviews in homes, offices, public terminals, on the street and through the mail.

The film contrasts the comfortable climate inside the church with the restless search that goes on constantly outside its four walls for something that can satisfy.

"We must be enlisted in finding God's ways for the 20th century," says NAE's general director, Dr. Clyde W. Taylor, who appears in the film. Also seen commenting on the present-day church situation are other evangelical leaders: Dr. Bernice Cory, senior vice-pres. of Scripture Press; Dr. Robert A. Cook, president of the King's College; Dr. Jared F. Gerig, president of the National Association of Evangelicals and Ft. Wayne Bible College; Dr. Ted Engstrom, executive vice president of World Vision; Dr. Stan Mooneyham, special assistant to Billy Graham; Dr. G. Aiken Taylor, editor, The Presbyterian Journal; The Reverend Frank W. Smith, vice-chairman of the Open Bible Standard Churches; Dr. Arthur M. Climenhaga, executive director, of N. A. E.

Mark 55th Anniversary

Wednesday, Feb. 9, will be a special day in the lives of Mr. and Mrs. John M. Heisey 305 North Barbara street.

For, on that day they will mark their 55th wedding anniversary.

Although both are in reasonably good health, it appeared doubtful this week that they would have any special party to celebrate the occasion. Heisey laughed this week as he recalled that on their 50th anniversary they had planned to have a special observance. But, he said, it snowed about like it did this past Sunday. The party was off.

The Heiseys were married at the home of her parents, the late Mr. and Mrs. Samuel N. Becker, by her 70-year-old grandfather, Elder Hiram Gible. She was Anna Gible Becker.

They have four children—Verna, wife of Elam Snyder of Lititz R1, Grace, wife of Damon Packard, Elizabethtown, Arlene, wife of Paul Wenger, Quarryville R1, and J. Stanley Heisey, Manheim R1. There also are 13 grandchildren and 6 great grandchildren.

Electric Frypan

An electric frypan or a deep-fat fryer frees one space on the range and gives controlled heat, says Mrs. Cecile Sinden, extension home management specialist of Penna. State university. The appliance, however, does not provide new cooking possibilities.

Skillet, frypan, and buffet pan are names for similar appliances. The only difference is in the shape and the number of handles. All the appliances are used to fry, stew, bake, or pan-broil foods
The frypan is a versatile utensil, for it can serve as a chafing dish or a food warmer for such foods as rolls, casseroles, and stews.

A deep-fat fryer, or a cooker-fryer as it is sometimes called, can be used to roast, steam, or bake foods. It also can be used to warm dinner rolls and as a buffet pan when you entertain, Mrs. Sinden points out.

Although it is a less versatile appliance, a griddle or grill does offer a large cooking surface for quick cooking of meats, eggs, or pancakes.

In electric frypans, you'll have a choice of aluminum, stainless setel, metal alloys, and ceramic. Some covers are dome-shaped to give extra cooking space. Some frypans have a nonstick coating, but they are more costly.

Before using a new electric appliance, read the instructions for its use and care, advises Mrs. Sinden. A new model may have use and care instructions different from the one you replaced. The manufacturer has prepared these for use, so follow them carefully. Keep the instructions in a convenient place where you can refer to them as needed.

The Worry Clinic

by Dr. Geo. W. Crane

My mother had studied the psychology textbook William James, our pioneer American psychologist, so she used psychology on us children, including the "little strokes" technique of Benjamin Franklin. Be sure to employ the daily "agenda" plan, too.

CASE U-409: When I was a boy, aged 11, I was put out in the potato patch, hoeing weeds.

It was on my grandmother's farm and the patch covered about half an acre.

Moreover, the weeds were taking over. So it looked to me as if I had an impossible job.

My mother then came out to see what I was doing.

She sensed my half-hearted outlook, so she seized my hoe and vigorously started chopping away at the weeds.

"Don't look at the whole patch," she advised me, "for that will be discouraging."

"Just focus on one hill at a time. And then imagine that it is the last one you need to hoe."

"After you finish with it, then take the next one and also make believe that it is the last one."

LITTLE STROKES

This is excellent Applied Psychology, for most of us get discouraged when we view total tasks that consume many hours or days of work.

Human beings crave quick victories.

It is easier to maintain morale when we can finish tasks in a short time.

"Little strokes," said Benjamin Franklin, "fell great oaks."

That quotation shows that Ben Franklin also appreciated the need to bolster morale by taking the piecemeal viewpoint.

In my case, I have authored several books including college texts in psychology that ran over 800 pages.

If I were to view an 800-page chore, I'd NEVER get started on such a Herculean task.

So I first made an outline of the 21 most popular fields of Applied Psychology.

Then I split each chapter into the ten most significant subdivisions.

On my written daily "agenda" I'd then list just one of these subheads.

Thus, I figuratively bit off small bites which I could handle in one day's writing.

And when I finished today's subhead under Chapter I, I crossed it off my agenda with a thick red pencil to inflate my morale.

Next day, I tackled the second subhead. And after a couple of weeks, I'd thus have an entire chapter finished.

In six months, the 846-page textbook was finished. And it didn't seem like such a Herculean task, after all, for I had employed Ben Franklin's "little strokes" technique.

Teen-agers, use this same "agenda" method for preparing your lessons and writing term papers or English themes.

Housewives, do the same for each day's household chores, including small items like washing the kitchen dishes, as well as larger tasks like ironing.

Even then, break down your ironing into "flat work" vs. "shirts," etc., so you can scratch out more items on your agenda.

(Always write to Dr. Crane in care of this newspaper, enclosing a long stamped, addressed envelope and 20c to cover typing and printing costs when you send for one of his booklets.)

ANTIQUe SHOW

THE CHURCH
IN FOCUS

That's what the young people and the adults want the church to do—focus on their problems—long enough—and realistically enough—to find some satisfying answers. And that's just what happens in this dramatic 40-minute picture called ANYTHING CAN HAPPEN
