Post Office Aids Livestock Study

Farmers in the Mount Joy area are being asked to supply pertinent information about livestock in a survey, starting May 20, Postmaster Elmer A. Zerphey has announced.

Cards will be delivered to farm mail boxes, selected at random on rural routes served by the Mount Joy post office.

These semi-annual surveys are conducted cooperatively each year by the Post Office and Agriculture Departments and serve as a basis for estimating numbers of livestock on farms; livestock production; the size of the pig, calf, lamb and wool crops; and the number of chickens raised. This information is of considerable importance to farmers, the livestock industry, industries serving agriculture, public agencies and the general public.

Farmers receiving survey cards have been urged to fill them out and return them promptly to mail carriers, Postmaster Zerphey said.

Ping-pong or table tennis, was first played at the end of the 19th century, and was originated by a sporting goods dealer in London, England.

Over The Back Fence

by Max Smith

IF YOU have any early vegetable or flower plants left in your garden, since the freezing weather of last week you might be on the alert for flea beetles; they are a very tiny, black insect that eats small, pinsized holes in the leaves; they will attack most any kind of a plant; the leaves will look like they were shot full of small holes; sometimes as much as one-half of the leaf surface will be damaged; this will retard growth and may reduce yields. I'd suggest the use of the insecticide, Sevin; two treatments several days apart should eliminate the problem.

THE FEEDING of sufficient amounts of salt to all types of livestock is very important; many producers are of the opinion that 1 to 2 percent in the ration will be adequate, but this is not true in most cases. Some animals require more salt than others just as among human beings; therefore, we should make an attempt to provide free choice of salt at all times. Many leading livestock authorities also insist that loose salt is much better than block salt for farm animals; it is easier for them to get the amount needed. I am inclined to agree with them because when some animals require larger amounts of salt, their tongues will get sore from licking the block salt long before their appetite has been satisfied; as a result, they do not get enough salt. The value of salt in the ration is an appetizer that makes the animal eat better and drink more water; also, adequate supplies of both salt and minerals in the ration stimulates the action of the digestive juices in the body. Provide free access to loose salt at all times.

STRAWBERRY growers who have made a new planting this spring should not only keep the weeds under control by frequent hand hoeing or cultivation, but pinch off the fruit buds before any blossoms appear. This is difficult to do in view of the fact that strawberries are being eliminated, but for the good of the plant and next year's crop, this should be done. If the new plants are permitted to bear fruit, the strength of the plant will go toward the fruit and as a result, there will be fewer and weaker runner plants develop early this summer. For the best yield next spring, the plant should be allowed to get strong runner plants early in the season. The sacrifice of a few berries this spring will result in a much better crop next year.

WE ARE often confronted with the problem of dairymen who get a different butterfat test from their D.H.I.A. milk tester than they do from their milk plant. This has been occurring for years and no doubt will continue in the future. There are many factors that contribute to the difference; changes in temperature and humidity, milking practices, the amount of exercise, the kind of grain and roughage, and the physical condition of the cow that particular day, are some of the common causes. Also, dairymen should realize that the time covered by the tests are not the same; DHIA tests are based upon one day's samples, while the milk plant tests are a composite of samples taken throughout the month. A variation of 1 to 2 percentage points is not unusual and should be acceptable.

EGGS ARE STILL A GOOD BUY

Eggs for breakfast are better quality and less expensive now than they were 30 years ago, says Herbert Jordan, extension poultry specialist at Penn State university. Eggs have actually been on a general price decline during this time. This is due to a good supply and efficiencies of the industry as well as a slight decrease in demand. If egg prices had gone up the same as the cost of living, then we would pay considerably more for eggs than we do.

Do not resent growing old—a great many are denied the privilege.
