Will Attend Library Conclave

Marjorie Aurick, Donegal high school senior, accompanied by Mrs. Mary Emma Llewellyn, high school librarian, will go to the Penn State campus Sept. 24, to attend the Pennsylvania State Library Assistants Association conference.

She is a member of the state organization's executive committee. She serves as the treasurer.

The Donegal contingent will be accompanied by two representatives from Hempfield Union School District. Marbeth King, a senior at the state library association. She will represent her school and will be accompanied by Miss Emily Carrigan, Hempfield librarian.

The fall conference will be devoted entirely to a business meeting. It was awarded last year to a student from Washington County who will enroll this fall at Mansfield State College.

To Love -- And Also To Share

The age-old marriage vow "to love, honor, and obey" is undergoing an important revision in the minds of thoughtful young college-age couples on the threshold of marriage. As they see it, the vow might better pledge both bride and groom "to love, honor, and share." This is one of the striking changes noted by Mrs. Ethel Nash, assistant professor of preventive medicine at the Bowman Gray School of Medicine, Winston-Salem, N. C. Mrs. Nash, who is also president of the American Association of Marriage Counselors, has for the past 10 years led a three-day seminar for engaged couples at Duke University in Durham, N. C.

"Over the years," Mrs. Nash says "there has been a distinct trend toward the 'colleague' marriage." Both men and women, she explained, no longer see the woman's role solely as wife, mother, housekeeper. Nor do they consider the woman solely as helpmeet during that short period when she works to help put her husband through graduate school or through the first years of his career. Instead, both men and women increasingly recognize that some women have talents and skills which can best be fulfilled in work outside the home. "The most striking change in this area," says Mrs. Nash, "is among the men.

They take enormous pride in their future wives' attainments in college and are increasingly encouraging them to develop themselves further after marriage."

Naturally such a change in the role of the woman implies a somewhat different role for the man, as well, Mrs. Nash noted. If wives and husbands both assume economic responsibilities outside the home—with the wife working full time—both must expect to share responsibilities in the home, as well.

The husband must be willing to take on such previously all-female chores as helping with the dishes or sorting laundry without considering it an affront to his masculinity. The wife must genuinely consider her household responsibilities as important as her job and perform them with as much grace and skill. When this happens, both will be fulfilled and the marriage is likely to be a successful one. When both or either assume roles they don't really want, the marriage is headed for trouble, Mrs. Nash observed.

Tribe Wins Moral Victory

Donegal Indians climbed the Mountain Friday night, Sept. 16, at Ephrata and planted a moral victory flag. The "victory" was actually a tie game—12 - 12—but it represented a big gain over the shutout the Tribe suffered a week earlier in the season's opener.

The Ephrata Mountaineers were hard put to stay in a tie, obliged to come from behind twice to remain even. And—there is no one to dispute the possibility that a couple more minutes might have spelled another touchdown.

Donegal was on the move and Indian fans were better pleased than a week earlier.

The tie game sends Donegal Saturday afternoon at two o'clock against the invading Hempfield eleven in one of the chief rivalry games of

The Tribe's first touchdown came in the first period with the game not very old when an intercepted pass by Ken Weber took the ball 60 yards to the three. On last down, quarterback May pushed the ball over.

In the third, after Ephrata had evened the count at 6-6 methodically down field and Wagner then hit Weber with a touchdown pass.

The Mounts evened the count in the fourth period.
