"LOOK AT the trash thrown into that pasture" can be repeated several times, if we were to drive along most any rural road in the county. Many farmers experience this problem but feel a bit helpless in its solution. I'm sure those folks guilty of throwing their junk on the private property of others would not appreciate this kind of treatment from their neighbors, or do many of them realize the possible damage to the farmers livestock and machinery because of this trash. Many empty containers may be poisonous to livestock and certainly both glass and metal when ground up by a field chopper will kill livestock. Township supervisors and officers are urged to make an effort to stop this littering and they might get some help from the land owners if a contact was made.

THE USE OF spring oats as a nurse crop for a new seeding of alfalfa is still being used to some degree; however, the straight spring seedings of alfalfa without a nurse crop seems to be giving better results. If the oats are to serve as a nurse crop then the rate should not be more than one bushel per acre; heavier seedings will give too much competition to the alfalfa seedlings. The oats should be allowed to come into the blossom stage and then cut for hay or silage. Full lime requirement of the soil should be satisfied before any alfalfa seeding is made.

THIS IS the time of the year when many soil samples are being taken for testing of lawns, gardens, and fields. The importance of extracting a very composite sample from the area cannot be over-emphasized. The value of the test will be in proportion to the time and effort spent in collecting a sample representing many throughout the field or plot; we usually suggest that the samples be taken from at least a dozen places in the field or garden. After being dried with natural air (not in oven), the sample should be put through a sieve or screen while being mixed well at every handling. A quick, poorly taken soil sample may be misleading and result in poor use of lime and fertilizer dollars.

SPRING seedings of alfalfa without any nurse crop are gaining throughout the state; this refers to the seeding of a new field of alfalfa in late March or early April without the use of spring oats; the advantage seems to be that all plant food and soil moisture goes to the alfalfa rather than some to the competing spring oats. When the straight seeding is made, it is very important to spray for weed control; the use of Eptam several days prior to seeding and working into

The Worry Clinic

by Dr. Geo. W. Crane

Joe may be forced to communicate by pencil and paper if he permits his defective hearing to grow worse. It is foolish to let false pride drive you blind or deaf, just because you are sensitive about wearing eye glasses or a hearing aid. Unused organs tend to atrophy, so keep your eyes and ears in action!

CASE X-463: Joe C., aged 57, is a close friend of mine. He and his vivacious wife were visiting at our home recently. But Joe often ignored questions Mrs. Crane and I put to him.

And he would often break right into the middle of somebody else's story.

At first glance, he appeared rude and snobbish.

But we knew differently, for Joe simply has waning hearing.

He can't catch ordinary conversation, so we immediately resorted to louder talk in order to help him stay in the conversation.

But this imposes an unwarranted burden on Joe's friends and employees!

Yet he could easily remedy this defect by a hearing aid.

In fact, I once high-pressed him into having his ears tested and he then purchased an excellent hearing aid.

But he is letting false pride prevent him from using it.

He thinks people will regard him as senile and a has-been if he wears the hearing aid.

Yet he is a smart college graduate and a very successful manufacturer, so his false pride is not a reflection on his I.Q.

As Joe and his wife were leaving our home, I went over to the door of his car and gave him a "Dutch uncle" bit of advice.

Even then I had to shout to make him hear.

But I warned him that I felt he would be stone deaf before he reached the age of 65 if he didn't use his hearing aid.

"Joe," I concluded, "you are now so deaf in your bad ear and I don't know how much hearing can be salvaged, even if you try to get that ear into use again."

"Since Mrs. Crane and I saw you 6 months ago your hearing has become very much less."

"In fact, I think your so-called good ear is reduced in its ability to pick up sounds."

"So you may need hearing aids for both ears."

"And by all means don't delay even one more day!"

"For disuse of an organ tends to let it atrophy much faster!"

That's why we also urge early treatment of a child's crossed eye.

For at the start, the crossed-eyed youngster has good vision in both eyes.

But it can't look two ways at once, so it soon disregards the images that fall on one retina and thus becomes one-eyed.

Meanwhile, that disregarded retina begins to atrophy. It can become practically blind, merely from disuse!

So we urge quick treatment of the cross-eye to salvage both retinas.

A similar thing happens to an unused ear!

For exercise improves the circulation of blood and thus the nutrition of both an organ, as well as a muscle.

Tie your arm to your side and omit use thereof for a year and it dwindles into hardly more than skin covered bone.

So be sure you insure hearing into your old age by nourishing your failing ears by use of a modern hearing aid.

Don't delay, for every day of disuse makes that bad ear grow deafer!

False pride and a juvenile egotism about remaining young, should not stop your use of a hearing aid.

Get properly fitted eye glasses, too, as well as false teeth, so you will enjoy your remaining years at the 100% level instead of only 50 or 25%.

arrived on schedule, and was most gracious and charming to her hostesses.

It was a memorable time, according to Mrs. Deardorff, and one long to be remembered by the ten Welcome Wagon ladies.

Scott Albert, young son of Mr. and Mrs. George Albert, New Haven street, is another Mount Joy person who had an interesting thing happen to him. It, also, concerns the kindness and graciousness of someone.

Scott collects presidential campaign paraphernalia, and has many, many items. With money given him for his birthday, he went to York just before Christmas to buy something from an antique dealer there who specializes in campaign stuff.

After several hours of fascinated browsing, he finally decided on the items he wanted. But his money wouldn't reach! Even with an additional birthday "advance" from his mother, he still couldn't quite make it. So, regretfully, he put two or three of the items back.

Imagine his surprise several days later, to receive a Christmas card from the antique dealer, with the chosen items enclosed!
