Timely Tips for Women

by Doris W. Thomas

Be A Wise Shopper:

Consumers need reliable information in order to provide their families with nutritious, wholesome, good quality, and economical meat.

Federal meat grades provide consistent quality guides that cut through unfamiliar names and advertising that otherwise might be confusing. The purple, shield-shaped mark tells the consumer what quality she is buying in any part of the country. Look for it when you buy.

Giving beef cuts exotic names—and usually higher prices—can confuse shoppers. Here, for example, are samples of non-standard names for meat cuts: rotisserie roast, California steak, western steak, boneless undercut steak, his and her steak, treasure steak, horse-shoe roast, butterfly steak. There is nothing wrong with this as long as the consumer knows where these cuts come from so she can cook them properly. Cuts from different parts of the carcass vary in tenderness, and for best results should be cooked differently. Most cuts from the rib and loin of U. S. Prime, Choice and Good Grades may be oven-roasted, broiled, or pan fried. Less tender cuts, such as those from the flank, plate, brisket, and fore-shank, regardless of grade, need long, slow cooking with moist heat to make them tender.

The Federal inspector provides quality measures for the consumer by grading which reflects variations in tenderness, juiciness and flavor. Quality terms such as lean western-fed, tender top-quality meat, supreme beef are not nationally recognized quality indicators and often confuse shoppers. Be a wise shopper! Decide first what kind of meat dish to cook. Then select the cut and grade which best fits the dish and your budget. These federal grades for beef are the ones most commonly found stamped on USDA inspected and graded meat sold in retail stores: U. S. PRIME—The top grade for meat, Prime with its abundant amount of marbling (fat within the lean) indicates highest quality. Its superior tenderness, juiciness, and flavor make meat of this grade the best for broiling and roasting.

U. S. CHOICE — The most popular grade with consumers, meat of this grade is also tender, juicy, and flavorful. Most U. S. Choice roasts and steaks may also be broiled or oven-roasted.

U. S. GOOD—A favorite of thrifty shoppers, meat of this grade is still of good quality, but because of less marbling it lacks the juiciness and flavor of the higher grades. Moist heat cooking will tenderize even the tougher cuts.

Laundry Centers Make Work Easier:

Present-day laundry equipment takes much of the drudgery out of the family washing. Machines now do almost everything except load and unload garments and regulate their own controls. Laundry equipment is no longer confined to the basement. If you're planning a new laundry center, put it where it will be most satisfactory and convenient for you and your family.

Time spent in other house-keeping activities and their relative importance to you may help determine a convenient location. Some families have the laundry center near the kitchen or a sewing area. Others install laundry equipment in the bathroom. Still others have found a satisfactory location in a hallway near bedrooms and bath. It will probably cost less if you plan the laundry center close to existing plumbing connections.

A home laundry center is even more convenient if other items are planned into its arrangement. Among these are a pretreating sink, plenty of natural or artificial light, hampers for soiled pieces, a table or countertop for sorting and folding, and easy-to-reach storage for laundry products. If you're planning to include ironing equipment in your laundry center, plan storage space for unironed clothing, ironing board, iron, and hanging space for garments as you iron or press them. Today's modern and attractive appliances can be located conveniently anywhere in your home. Your washday will be an easier day, every day of the week.
