Nation Must Restore Domestic Tranquility

By U.S. Senator Hugh Scott

We have a mandate in this country to bring about the restoration of domestic tranquility. Nothing less than a combined and concerted effort by local, State and Federal Government, business, civic and religious groups will enable us to deal with the problems of our urban areas. I introduced in the Senate several bills to correct immediate problems, and urged further action to reach the root of rioting.

Riot Relief

I introduced a bill designed to provide help under existing laws for the innocent victims of man-made riots. My bill redefines "major disaster" to include riots, and makes assistance applicable to those victimized through the Small Business Act and through rent supplements, urban renewal programs and mortgage insurance.

Riot Prevention

The majority of people who live in areas hit by riots strongly oppose disorder and violence. I introduced in the Senate a resolution calling for the organization of a Neighborhood Action Crusade to work as a stabilizing influence in those areas. Communication, understanding, and positive action on a neighbor-to-neighbor basis can cool smoldering tempers and avert further disorder.

Riot Publicity

While it is the duty of the news industry to report on mass demonstrations and riots, it is their duty also to maintain proper news perspective. I believe that the news media, while generally responsible, in some instances inadvertently contributed to the turmoil of recent civil disturbances. I suggested that there is a need for greater balance in news coverage. The constant repetition of inflammatory statements made by persons like H. Rap Brown should be balanced with pleas for reasonable conduct from responsible and more representative leaders, such as Roy Wilkins, Whitney Young, H. Philip Randolph, and Martin Luther

I have received many interesting comments reflecting a wide range of opinion, which indicates the serious attention given this matter by both representatives of the media and the general public.

Rat Control

Rats know no socio-economic boundaries. Disease-ridden vermin plague small river towns and fashionable waterfront communities as seriously as they do urban slums. I introduced to the Senate a rat extermination bill identical to one dismissed from the House. My bill would provide Federal assistance for local rat extermination projects under existing Federal programs, and would authorize $20 million for each of the fiscal years 1968 and 1969.

Jobs

The number of jobs created by the birth and growth of small business is the most effective weapon yet devised to fight a war on poverty. As a member of the Senate Committee on Small Business I keynoted the Small Business Administration's Mid-Atlantic Award Ceremony in Philadelphia, where I stated that small business, collectively, is the Nation's largest employer. Each time SBA assists an applicant, whether in Watts, Appalachia, Philadelphia or elsewhere, new jobs are created and existing ones saved.

Housing

Along with nine Republican Senators, I urged Congress to appropriate adequate funds for recently enacted urban programs, including model cities and rent supplements, programs which I discussed last month. Properly administered and adequately financed, these new programs can revitalize our metropolitan areas and raise the living standards of their residents.

Rural Development

I cosponsored legislation designed to substantially expend the quantity and quality of economic opportunities in rural America. This bill would provide tax incentives to business enterprises that move into and create new jobs in economically deficient rural areas. Most people in rural areas would prefer to remain there if they could earn a living. New jobs would help stem migration to our over-crowded cities.

Judgeships

The Senate passed legislation, which I introduced earlier in this Session, to provide the full number of judgeships intended by Congress for the Eastern District of Pennsylvania. It will enable the President to appoint a successor to fill the vacancy created by the elevation of Judge Van Dusen to a higher court. This will be of major assistance in helping to reduce the serious backlog of cases in that district.

Working Memorial

Pennsylvanians can look forward to visiting the James Madison Memorial Building in Washington when it is completed. It will serve as a much needed third building for the Library of Congress, eliminating the present cost of extensive rental quarters. The building will include a James Madison Memorial Hall with documents and memorabilia; the James Madison Reading Room with Presidential papers, manuscripts and rare books; a preservation laboratory, offices, the Law Library, Legislative Reference Service, reference rooms, the Information Systems Office and related computer facilities, and additional shelving facilities. I am on the project's Coordinating Committee as a member of the Joint Committee on the Library.
