WASHINGTON REPORT

Congressman Edwin D. Eshleman

16th District—Pennsylvania

The business of the Congress will begin officially again on January 15. Our adjournment break is nearly over and the issues and problems to be faced seem to be mounting daily. The New Year has not by any means brought with it a solution for all of the old areas of national concern. Perhaps, and we may be hopeful, as 1968 progresses, at least some of the problems will be meaningfully resolved.

One subject of heated debate has most definitely carried over into the new year—the draft. During the past month or so, the controversy has grown extremely intense on the matter of drafting young men for military service. Most of the recent arguments centered around the Selective Service ruling that would end the deferments of youths participating in illegal demonstrations and make these young men eligible for the draft. However, looking beyond just this present disagreement, the real issue would seem to be the desirability of keeping the Selective Service System indefinitely.

With the war in Vietnam making demands on manpower strength, the basic question of the possible elimination of the draft system must be deferred for the time. But, it is a matter which should be considered in any discussion of future military needs. The draft was created to produce manpower for the armed services. If today we can devise a better method for accomplishing the same purpose, then we should begin to reevaluate the Selective Service System.

I tend to believe that some worthwhile suggestions have been offered toward the creation of a volunteer army. These plans would significantly boost the rate of military pay and therefore increase the desirability of a military career. The number of young men volunteering to serve in the military would then rise to such levels that the draft would no longer be needed. Of course, the matter is not quite as simple as it might appear. For instance, the cost factor would be of tremendous significance. The higher pay levels would increase spending by several billions of dollars which would be offset only by the reduced costs brought on by the Board of Directors will be held on Monday, January 22, 1968, at 8 p.m. at St. Mark's E.U.B. church, East Main St., Mount Joy, Pa.

The public is invited to attend.
Signed,
Susan M. Heisey, Secretary
Mount Joy Library Center

BUDGET

The prepared budget of East Donegal township road district is on display at the Union National Mount Joy bank, Maytown branch, for inspection.

Secretary Board of Supervisors, East Donegal Township. 32-2c

LEGAL NOTICE

Sealed proposals will be received and publicly opened and read by the supervisors of East Donegal Township at the township office, Maytown, Lancaster county, Pennsylvania, until 8 o'clock p.m., Eastern Standard Time Thursday, February 8, 1968.

draft elimination. Nevertheless, when the national welfare in times of crisis is considered, the professional military concept would seem to be vastly superior to the series of protests and illegal actions with which we are faced today.

It might be well to stress again that revision of the present draft law could not be accomplished at least until the hostilities in Vietnam are ended. Our present efforts in Southeast Asia direct that our manpower procurement remain basically unchanged. Also, it should be stressed that any draft revision is not a sign of giving in to the demands of misguided youths. Their behavior presently is deplorable and in many cases illegal. Whether or not they are to be punished by the courts or the draft is yet to be determined. There is no doubt that these youths should be properly penalized for their actions. However, their display of disrespect should not prevent us from making a meaningful study toward the possible future elimination of the Selective Service. The end result of such a study could be a valuable contribution to the armed forces and the nation as a whole.

has made some 250 quilts. She has given them to her children, grandchildren, and her church. We can imagine that she doesn't know what it is to be "bored"—in mid-January, or any other month, either!

"bays" be added to the present building.

We might add that at that same time would be a fine opportunity to do a bit more "sprucing up" of the entire adjoining area.

The heart transplants which have been in the news have thrilled practically everyone and the whole world has been touched by the breakthrough toward another phase of medical achievement.

The current topic of conversation instantly became a focal question of great importance to an area young man who a few days ago was interviewed as a prospective medical student.

The interviewer wanted the young man to talk about the heart transplant. But, he was not interested in anything concerning the medical aspect of the surgery. He wanted the candidate to discuss some of the ethics of the taking of a part of one human being and placing it into another.

It was a tough question, in a new field, in new context—especially for a young man who also is thinking seriously of taking to the ministry. How he discussed this new concept may well have determined which way he may go.

AVOID AN EXCESS OF VITAMINS

Taking an excess of Vitamin concentrate or pure vitamins may cause a condition known as hypervitaminosis. Louise W. Hamilton, Penn State extension foods and nutrition specialist, says the conditions refers to vitamin A and vitamin D, both fat-soluble vitamins as it does water-soluble ones.
