Sunday, March 24. She had been under the care of a physician for some time.

She was the widow of Reuben Hess Miller, who died in 1963. Mrs. Miller was born in Lancaster, a daughter of the late Adam and Helen Garner Ferich.

A resident of Salunga for the past 50 years, she was a member of the Zion Lutheran Church, Landisville; and the Landisville - Salunga Golden Age Club. She was interested in gardening and birdlore.

HIGHER THAN NORMAL SEEDING RATE GIVES PENNFIELD OATS BEST YIELDS

For maximum yields of Pennfield oats, plant this variety at three or four bushels of seed per acre instead of the usual two bushels per acre used with other oat varieties, suggest small grain breeders and extension specialists for the College of Agriculture at The Pennsylvania State University. In trials in six counties last summer, Pennfield oats yielded 88 bushels per acre at the four-bushels seeding rate compared with 76 bushels per acre at the two-bushel rate. And Pennfield exceeded the next best variety, Garry, by seven bushels per acre.

The results show a clear-cut yield advantage of 12 bushels per acre for the higher seeding rate with Pennfield, according to Robert P. Pfeifer and Elmer C. Pifer, small grain breeder and agronomy specialist, respectively, for Penn State. The drill strip trials were carried out by Mr. Pifer and associates in Berks, Indiana, Mercer, Perry, Somerset, and Washington counties.

In research trials in Centre and Columbia counties, comparing recommended varieties, only Pennfield responded to the higher seeding rate is sufficient for Garry, Clintland, Clintford, and Russell. The straw will go down if these varieties are planted thicker, the Penn Staters have found.

The seeds of Pennfield are larger than other varieties with fewer seeds per pound or per bushel. Seeding at the heavier rate compensates for the lesser number of seeds and takes advantage of Pennfield's strong straw. Adequate moisture in 1967 showed that this variety ranked at the top in yield potential.
